Council Balks Hunger March Drive by Police

CALL CLARK TO CUT BUDGET

Today

Along the Big Ocean. Building a Turtle Shell. The Stone Quarry Fight. Heaven Number Two.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Dec. 1.

THE EARLY morning drive from San Simeon here along the edge of the Pacific Ocean, about one hundred and sixty miles, might make you take a more cheerful view of our depression. It certainly would make that depression seem less important.

INTO THAT vast ocean, stretching in a curve thousands of miles to the west, ten thousand Old Man Mississippi Rivers might pour their waters, and not change the ocean level one-hundredth part of an inch.

It is an ocean to make worrying human microbes, along its shores, ask themselves what they are worrying about.

ALL OF THE two thousand million human beings on earth might be gathered on the hills that roll away to the east, and they would not be noticed by the wide ocean or the brilliant rainbow thrown by the rising sun on great white clouds, piled up to the northwest.

Clouds are not satisfied to be straight, commonplace, orderly clouds, out here.

They must be heaped in great fluffy balls, one above the other, far up into the blue sky, until they make the mountains look like small pedestals for cloud majesty.

TWO MEN on foot walk the highway, before you, each carrying a blanket-roll on his back, and in it everything that he owns on earth except the clothes that cover him. You might unroll those blankets and behold everything accumulated in this richest country in two lifetimes.

That is not as sad as it sounds. Spinoza, greatest abstract philosopher, left to his sister a bed and a small silver penknife, no money, land, no house, but his thought has taught and inspired the world's greatest thinking men.

AND THOSE two men walking the road have no apartment houses, with mortgages on them taller than the apartments, no bank loans, always coming due, no payrolls to meet, no wondering about today's ticker news or tomorrow's message from the broker.

They represent the only real freedom, ABSENCE OF POSSESSION, as they stride along. Prosperous man is a turtle, who spends his life building around him a heavy shell of property under which he must always crawl.

IN YESTERDAY'S Santa Barbara "Morning Press," which will print this today, you read about three felons at hard labor in the stone quarry of San Quentin prison, just north of here, engaging in a murderous quarrel, with pieces of jagged rock. Threats of the guards to shoot them dead calmed them, after half an hour's battle, when they had nearly killed each other.

There they were, imprisoned, forced to labor for their bread, and trying to kill each other, with no more intelligence than the great nations in the big war.

W. R. HEARST suggests a law that would forbid American financial or other institutions making any loans to foreign countries that fail to pay their war debts to the people of the United States.

That should make our foreign debtors thoughtful, for this country, with all its depression, is to remain the fountain of gold for some time to come.

YOU WILL see Santa Barbara of course, when you come out to this coast. The editor of the Santa Barbara "Morning Press" remarks truly, that if you put white-winged angels with harps in place of the palms, golf bunkers and bungalows along these hills, it would be an exact reproduction of heaven.

The two Santa Barbara newspapers, News and Press, have merged, by the way, and most profitably, while keeping separate staffs of writers, editors, etc. Publishers in many other cities might write to Thomas M. Storke, publisher and president, to learn details, to their advantage.

ONE HUNDRED and fifty miles more of driving, through canyon, up the mountain, and across the desert from Ventura to Victorville and on to Hodge, will take you from this hospitable "Morning Press" office and typewriting machine to the train that carries across three thousand miles, through Chicago and the other wasps' nests back to New York.

New York will supply its usual crop of worries, but the memory of the great ocean, those mountains of rock and clouds, and that divinely invented rainbow, all so peaceful in a fretful world, will remind you that nothing really matters.

Ocean, clouds and mountains will be there, in all their beauty, when today's little troubles will be forgotten, and men will ask: "To which depression do you refer?"

Jane Thurston At Divorce Court

JANE THURSTON HARRIS . . HER DIVORCE IN COURT TODAY

Mrs. Harry Harris, modishly dressed in black today as she appeared at the courthouse in her suit to divorce young Mr. Harris, playboy son of the late Senator John P. Harris. If she wins her decree, she'll go back astage. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

HARRIS BEAT HER, JANE TESTIFIES

Daughter of Magician Tells of Strife in Plea for Divorce

Harry Harris, the Pittsburgh playboy, blackened the eyes of his beautiful blonde wife, Jane Thurston, so many times, Jane said in Divorce Court today, that she couldn't estimate the number.

For 20 minutes the pretty daughter of the famed magician told from the witness stand the story of her almost three years of marriage to the heir of the late Senator John P. Harris.

Three weeks after they had secretly eloped in January of 1930 he started drinking and beating her, Jane testified as she drew the collar of her brown mink coat closer about her. And from then until she left him for the sixth or seventh time last May she told of countless beatings.

NERVOUS ON STAND

And the names he called her!

Judge James H. Gray came to Jane's assistance and agreed that she needn't announce the names in court. So Jane's fingers trembled nervously as she wrote the descriptions on paper for the court stenographer.

The young actress who has sung and danced in her father's show testified in a low, distinct voice. Here are excerpts of her testimony:

"After our show closed we drove home to father's. Some friends of mine gave me a reception and they were nice to Harry. He got very drunk as the day went on. He hit me and

POLICE DRIVE ON MARCH BALKED

'Hunger' Visitors Get Aid of Council, School Board

Council had taken the hunger out of the national "hunger march" today and thereby softened the iron hand the police had intended to show when several hundred marchers reported trekking from the west arrive in the city.

It was the police plan to meet the arriving delegations, escort them to West Park, North Side, and let them rest there and eat from their own knapsacks—if they had any—and then show them the road that leads to Washington, D. C.

Then it was revealed that, unbeknown to the police, Council had provided a tidy sum of money from the City Welfare Department to feed and shelter the visitors. The Board of Education had provided meeting places, unaware, according to Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools, that such action interferred with Police Department plans.

DETOUR AT NEW CASTLE

Washington, according to dispatches from the capital, is planning a chilly reception for the marchers, and at New Castle, Pa., the police prepared to detour one group so they would not even enter the city en route to Pittsburgh.

It was a new departure here from the city's time honored method of showing scant ceremony to Washington-bound "hunger marchers," and Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh let it be known the police do not approve.

While the vanguard of the marchers—estimated by sources outside the city at several hundred — approached from Ohio cities, a detail of 50 motorcycle and mounted police was marshalled to meet and escort them to West Park.

SUPPLIES PROVIDED

A. J. Marsh, North Side representative of the Unemployed Council, a group associated with the "hunger march," said more than 1,000 pounds of meat, 400 dozens of eggs, bread and other food had been delivered.

J. I. McDonough, examiner in the City Welfare Department said Council authorized expenditures of $166 for gasoline, $460 for food and $37 for shelter.

Police were informed five trucks and three passenger automobiles carrying demonstrators were nearing the city on Route 22 from Steubenville, O.

A group estimated at 1,500 persons left Youngstown, O., this morning for New Castle, and Cleveland police informed Walsh that a caravan of 600 was en route to Pittsburgh from the Cleveland district.

Cut City Taxes!

The budget estimate sent to City Council by Mayor Kline would necessitate a 7-mill increase in taxes if adopted.

Following are the opinions of some of Pittsburgh's leaders concerning the tax situation:

G. M. Laughlin, Jr., chairman of the Board, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation:

"The most important subject affecting the citizens and taxpayers of this city today is the 1933 budget, now in the hands of the Council for study and action. The future welfare of the city depends upon the extent to which the tax burden is lessened and the skill with which it is done. The welfare of every man, woman and child in the city of Pittsburgh is concerned."

L. F. Rains, president of the A. M. Byers Company:

"There is no doubt about the imperative need to reduce taxes at this time. All types of industries have made great strides in reducing their operating costs and in eliminating unnecessary expenses. Municipal governments should follow the lead of industry in cutting down expenses so that the tax burden can be lightened."

Howard Irish, president of the Commonwealth Trust Company:

"By all means, taxes must be reduced. Real estate has reached such a situation that present taxes practically amount to confiscation. An increase in taxes which would be required under the Mayor's budget would be utterly wrong. Real estate owners cannot continue to pay high rates of taxes while rents are drastically curtailed in line with present business conditions.

"There should be a reassessment of property values in line with today's values and earning power. This would result in a drastic cut in taxes. Such a step is imperative."

C. M. Yohe, vice president of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad:

"Taxes have become an almost overwhelming burden on industry and individuals. The railroads in particular have found taxes a steadily increasing drain on their revenues. I have not studied the problem sufficiently to say just how far we can go in reducing the expenses of municipal government, but there is no doubt about the fact that every effort should be made to bring about economies in order to reduce taxes."

W. J. Strassburger, operator of the Grant Building:

"Pittsburgh will go backward instead of forward unless something is done to relieve the excessive burden placed on real estate by our present high taxes. Taxes in Philadelphia are shown to be considerably lower than in Pittsburgh if comparison is made of the charges on a basis of square feet of rentable area. I believe that taxes on homes also are higher. Unless this situation is corrected industries and families will stop coming to Pittsburgh and the city will start to decline instead of continuing to rise."

William E. Best, director of the Federal Home Loan Bank:

"Unless taxes are reduced we shall destroy the desirability of home ownership. This will strike a telling blow at American thrift. The injustice of prevailing high taxes on real estate can be seen from the fact that a man with $10,000 is subject only to a four-mill state tax, but a man with a $10,000 home may pay taxes of more than $400. It is possible for municipal government to institute economies fully as great as those made by industrial corporations. The city of Jacksonville, Fla., has cut its tax rate from 19 mills to 11 mills. This is an indication of what can be done."

CITY COUNCIL OPENS DRIVE ON COSTS

Safety Head Asked to Explain Boost In Estimates

Public Safety Director James M. Clark has been asked to appear before City Council tomorrow as it launches its drive to slash the $25,000,000 city budget.

Clark will be asked to explain why, in the face of repeated demands by Council, civic and taxpayers' groups, for utmost economy the estimated expenditures for his department in 1933, totaling more than $6,000,000, are $435,017 above this year's cost.

Public Works Director E. G. Lang, also summoned, reported that he would not be ready for the inquiry until next week. He conferred with bureau heads today looking toward possible consolidations.

All department heads will be called upon to face council and defend their budget estimates.

KLINE ASKS REPORTS

Mayor Charles H. Kline has requested his department chiefs to comply with the city-wide demand to reduce their estimates but has requested, according to reports, that contemplated payroll cuts be first submitted to him.

The Mayor bowed to the will of Council yesterday following a three-hour session with his cabinet. In a conversation with reporters, he said:

"The department heads were told to cut things down to the core and to comply with the wishes of Council. That is all I have to say."

Council, in the meantime, is united in its economy campaign. President John S. Herron again declared yesterday that the budget must be cut.

TAXPAYERS PROTEST

The threatened increase of seven mills in city taxes, which would be required to balance the $25,206,228 budget coming from the Mayor's office if reduced tax collections and increased city deficit are considered, has stirred up a storm of protest among taxpayers.

J. W. Bamford, chairman of the taxation committee of the Building Owners and Managers Association, has written to Herron asking that Council not only prevent an increase in taxes but actually cut taxes to avoid a catastrophe for the taxpayers.

Many citizens are considering a taxpayers' strike, Bamford said. He declared there is much indignation at "the apparent indifference of the chief executive."

The Building Owners and Managers have been granted a hearing on the budget next Wednesday before Council.

MEET TOMORROW

A public meeting of property holders will be held in the Chamber of Commerce at 4 p. m. tomorrow, to discuss immediate action on taxation and regulated employment. It will be sponsored by J. Dimling, Thomas Liggett, W. Wasson, J. Blair and others. The public has been asked to attend the meeting.

Public Works was the only department to show a substantial reduction in the Mayor's budget. It was cut from this year's

MISS EARHART BEATEN BY FOG

All landlubber complaints against the fog were silenced today by Amelia Earhart and Helen Richey.

The young, likeable woman who flew the Atlantic Ocean alone and the attractive McKeesport brunet who is also a flier, were lost, more or less, in that same fog hundreds of feet over Pittsburgh today in an open plane.

So they simply turned the nose of their ship around and flew to Butler, where they landed safely—and without a complaint. Said Miss Earhart, quite casually:

"Miss Richey flew me from Erie—I like to fly with woman pilots—and when we reached the river at Pittsburgh we decided the fog was too thick, so we turned around. I suppose we could have made it by going around the river and landing at Bettis Field, but that seemed too much bother."

Miss Earhart left this afternoon will speak to Wilkinsburg High School students and tonight to a public audience in the school.

NEW CITY, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Crying out, "I don't want to remember!" Charlotte Gibson, on whose charges Sidney Herbert Homewood is being tried here, was assisted from the witness stand in hysterics this morning.

The society girl, who has described herself as so innocent she did not know what "necking" was, came back to the witness stand for cross-examination by her former suitor's attorney. She had shown no ill effects of her five and one-half hours' questioning yesterday, although she will become a mother this month.

Hearing cries of her 7-month-old nephew today, Mrs. Morris Skelskey, 1444 Tolma avenue, Dormont, awoke to find the house on fire. She carried the baby downstairs through the smoke to safety while her daughter Jean, 17, braved the flames to open a cellar door, freeing a dog. The fire, attributed to an overheated furnace, caused $800 damage, Fire Chief L. J. Matter reported.

McKellar Backs Hearst 'No Cancellation' Stand

By KENNETH M'KELLAR
United States Senator From Tennessee
Written Expressly for Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. — I heartily indorse the attitude of William Randolph Hearst toward foreign debts and support his program of no moratorium, no reduction and no cancellation.

Mr. Hearst and his papers have performed a wonderful service for the American people in fighting efforts to unload these foreign debts onto the backs of the American taxpayer.

I cannot believe that Great Britain will repudiate in any way her indebtedness to the United States, but I believe she and the other nations will make the payments when they fall due.

If she should set other nations and other people the example of repudiating debts, it would be just too bad for her, for no doubt other people would promptly follow her example of repudiation to her great injury.

I do not concur in the view that it is to America's interests to cancel these debts. Indeed, they cannot be cancelled. They can only be transferred to our already heavily-burdened taxpayers. We have an empty treasury, and a larger deficit than any other nation and never in our history have we needed money justly owing to us more than at the present moment.

But for the constant agitation of the foreign debt question by our own federal officials in America and by international bankers and others personally interested with them, there would be no debt question, and these European nations would be paying without protest. Selfish Americans do more to keep up the agitation than the European nations themselves.

Mr. Hearst is right in his opposition to Reconstruction Finance Corporation money being used directly or indirectly for financing foreign nations. Congress never intended any such use of the money turned over to the R. F. C.

I belive we might well set up a committee like the capital issues committee which was created after the World War, to pass upon all foreign loans before they are made.

HOOVER STUDIES BRITISH NOTE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Poring over a 6,000-word note from Great Britain, President Hoover and his secretaries of state and treasury deliberated today as to what should be America's next war debts move.

The document was carried to the White House by Secretary Stimson immediately after it had been delivered to him at his home the first thing this morning by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British abassador.

The British reply, to be made public tomorrow, was understood to present reasons why Great Britain feels her request for postponement of her December payments and for a discussion of the whole war debt matter should be granted.

Before the day is over, Washington officials expected also to receive France's reply to the American note which denied an extension of the moratorium to cover December payments, and stating that war debt revision is a matter for Congress to dec

COURT RULING DE[illegible] SHELBY BANK RECORDS SUBPENA

P. S. C. PROBERS MEET NEW SETBACK

Temporary Injunction To Guard Books Continued

By E. W. PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 1.—Delay—the weapon that is holding back and possibly destroying further investigation by the Rial committee into the Public Service Commission—won another victory today.

After granting Counsel C. K. Eaton, of the Senate committee, the right to become co-defendant with the Second National Bank in the injunction suit brought by S. Ray Shelby, Uniontown member of the Public Service Commission, Judge Thomas H. Hudson granted continuance of the temporary injunction until next Wednesday. He set 9:30 o'clock as the time for the hearing of arguments.

His decisions came after a brief but hot legal battle between Eaton and Frank B. Ingersoll, of Pittsburgh, attorney for Shelby. The effect of the continuance is to hold up any subpenaing of the bank records of Shelby in the Second National Bank.

BATTLE SHIFTS

The battle of Eaton against the commissioners and utilities switched today to the modest little courtroom in Uniontown from the state Capitol. The courtroom was filled with lawyers and Fayette County spectators. Commissioner Shelby did not attend.

Pleading that he did not know until this morning that Eaton planned to intervene and ask the court permission to become defendant with the bank, Attorney Ingersoll objected to the intervention. Both counsel had made no objection to a statement from the bank's attorney, explaining the bank felt the committee was the real defendant.

Ingersoll asked the court to hold the intervener in abeyance. Judge Hudson refused and admitted the committee's petition.

In his argument, Ingersoll declared that he objected to the petition on the grounds that it was not the "usual and normal powers of the Senate to investigate the conduct and activities of the members of the Public Service Commission," and added:

"There are several other objections but I do not believe that this is a function of the Senate. And I am of the opinion that the committee at this time has no standing in this court."

Eaton hotly replied:

"As to the standing of the committee, we're here. The court has the say as to whether we can stay or get out."

PETITION GRANTED

The court ruled the opponents down and granted Eaton's petition.

Immediately Shelby's counsel asked for continuance of the case until Friday of next week. The court suggested Monday. Eaton objected to the delay, declaring:

"This is one of the most far-reaching cases in our time—and this court may never see another of its importance, not to the committee as such, but to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. It questions the right of the legislative branch of the government. It is a situation where the arm of this court reaches into the Pennsylvania Senate and holds up its functioning."

An hour after the argument, Commissioner Shelby, through his attorney, H. E. Hackney, requested Attorney Eaton to agree a further continuance of the arguments on the injunction until Friday—the day Ingersoll had requested during the hearing. The reason was attributed to a public service hearing selected for Shelby on Wednesday.

Eaton failed to commit himself to the delay, and is prepared to appear [illegible] before Judge Hudson in the ev[illegible]ckney presents his request to the court.

Meanwhile, with Eaton and his aides fighting in the courts, investigators will proceed in their undercover research, and the ommittee and its advisors will repare recommendations for the hanging of utility laws in the xt session beginning in January.

U. S. COMPLETES LOTTERY CASE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(INS.)—The government rested its case this afternoon at the trial of Conrad H. Mann, of Kansas City, and three other defendants, charged with violating the federal lottery laws. The prosecution completed its case after only calling a half dozen witnesses.

The basic evidence against the four men accused of conducting a lottery to raise funds for the Fretarnal Order of Eagles was introduced rapidly. It consisted of testimony concerning the shipment of tickets for the 1931 Eagle frolic from state to state and the calling of a recipient of a ticket and a prize-winner.

The government charges that Mann and Bernard C. McGuire, promoter, split $430,000 profits from the frolic, which was run as a lottery.

Those on trial, in addition to Mann and McGuire, are Frank E. Hering, editor of the Eagles Magazine, and Raymond Walsh, assistant to McGuire.

RUPP TO MAKE SENATE PLEA

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—S. Davis Wilson, chairman of the independent Roosevelt campaign committee, said today he was preparing to file a petition with the United States Senate contesting the election of James J. Davis, Republican Senator from Pennsylvania.

Wilson declared that Lawrence H. Rupp, Democrat, of Allentown, who, on the unofficial returns was defeated by 170,000, will be shown by the evidence gathered to have been elected.

Wilson made his statement following published reports from Warm Springs, Ga., where President-elect Roosevelt is spending a vacation, quoting James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, as saying:

"The Democrats will go the limit to keep Davis out of the Senate if Rupp makes out a substantial case of proving that Davis was elected by fraud."

WHISKY VAULT HALTS RAZING

Workmen wrecking the old Iron City Electric Company Building, William Penn and Strawberry ways, have run into difficulties in the heavy walls of the old whisky vault, where liquor was once kept when the building was occupied by the Gilmore Drug Company.

The walls are in some cases four feet thick, and the floors braced with heavy plank. Although valuables have been found in walls of buildings wrecked at various times in the Triangle, contractors doubted that any whisky would be found hidden in the masonry.

The building is being torn down to provide for an automobile parking station.

ROOSEVELT SET TO AID FARMS

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Dec. 1.—President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt virtually has abandoned hope of avoiding a special session of Congress next spring, it was indicated today by his advisers.

Several Senators and Congressmen with whom Gov. Roosevelt has conferred this week have warned him it will be practically impossible to enact a comprehensive farm relief program at the "lame duck" session. Mr. Roosevelt is understood to have declared that if some action is not taken at the short session to help the farmer he will summon Congress into special session immediately after his inauguration.

The President-elect is said to be confident the federal budget can be balanced without imposing any new taxes, except a levy on beer. At the same time he has made it plain he will not hesitate to recommend new taxes if they are needed for unemployment relief.

FIGHT FOR DRY FUNDS; REPEAL VOTE MONDAY

Enforcers to Ask Millions Despite Beer Stampede

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The presidential budget bureau and Attorney-General Mitchell today urged Congressional leaders to continue this year's dry enforcement fund despite repeal agitation and demands for a sharp cut in enforcement expenditures.

The recommendation was placed before the House Appropriations Sub-Committee on the Justice Department supply bill. Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock backed the demand.

With many wets demanding that prohibition enforcement funds be eliminated or cut in half, a battle on the floor of Congress is certain.

The budget bureau recommended $9,599,948 for the prohibition bureau for the fiscal year beginning July 1. In addition, upward of $30,000,000 will be sought for the Coast Guard and other enforcement agencies.

Meantime, House leaders were knee-deep in preparations for a vote on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment Monday.

Republican leaders, it was learned, are preparing to serve upon Speaker Garner a demand that the House be permitted to vote on the Republican national platform method of repeal.

Their program includes specific provisions for protection of dry states and outlawing of the saloon through a new constitutional provision.

HUNTERS FIND NO DEER

The first day of the deer hunting season in Allegheny County was a flop, Game Protector Ralph A. Liphart admitted this afternoon. He had scoured a large section of the northwestern portion of the county and stepped over into Beaver County, but he couldn't find any person who even heard of a deer being killed. In his travels he heard just two shots, in Wagner's hollow back of Sewickley Heights, and couldn't find out who fired them.

The fog that blanketed Pittsburgh today spread into the country districts and probably accounted for the ill luck of the deer hunters. In the rural sections the fog did not lift until late in the morning.

Many of the hunters gave up in disgust at noon.

LABOR TO FIGHT FOR 5-DAY WEEK

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Strikes will be only "a last resort" in the American Federation of Labor's efforts to establish unemployment insurance and the 30-hour week for the American workingman, leaders of the organization said today.

The insurance plan, which would be paid for by employers and administered by the states, was adopted almost unanimously yesterday in the federation's convention here. The six-hour day and five-day week was ratified Tuesday under similar circumstances.

President William Green and numerous other federation leaders were among those who advocated peaceful attempts to gain the objectives, but Green himself said:

"We will use force, if necessary, to obtain our demands for the shorter work-week."

By "force," Green explained, he meant "strikes, boycotts and picketing."

Police attributed the shooting to a bootleg feud. Kennedy was taken into custody for questioning.

The gunmen sped away rapidly after the shooting. They were riding in an automobile bearing Michigan license plates. It was reported to have headed for Detroit.

FIRST HUSBAND THOUGHT DEAD PARTS PAIR WED 25 YEARS

DIVORCE OFFER FAILS TO COOL IRE OF NO. 3

He Asks Annulment After Celebrating Silver Wedding

Her first husband, whom she had long thought dead, today loomed as a barrier between a Swissvale wife and the man to whom she had been happily wedded for 25 years.

Mrs. Nettie A. Smith, 54, was preparing to leave the tidy home at 2305 Manor avenue, Swissvale, which she had kept with so much pride, for the home of her aged mother in Texas.

SUED BY HUSBAND

Her husband, Vincent P. Smith, 51, Pennsylvania Railroad car inspector, had filed proceedings to annul their marriage, charging his wife had never obtained a divorce from her first husband.

Disconsolately Smith told of suspicions aroused by a sister-in-law, of taking a trip to Frederick, Md., and of finding there a broken old man who gave him names and dates which convinced him the man was the first husband of the woman to whom Smith was married a quarter of a century ago.

SEPARATED 35 YEARS

The wife told of leaving her first husband, Harry C. Smith, in Frederick, 35 years ago, when he failed to support her, and of going to live in Derry, Pa. She later advertised for him and wrote him a letter which was returned.

Believing her first husband dead, she related, she married William Scully, who was killed in a California earthquake. Then she married Vincent Smith while she kept a boarding house in Wall.

The couple had recently celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. But the husband appeared adamant against renewing their marriage even though his wife obtained a divorce from her original husband. He will go it alone from now on, he insisted.

'First' Sleep in Six Months -:- Dancing Their Last Steps in the Marathon

TRAINER MARY SAFLARSKY DANCER VERE MARCHONE

Vere in deep sleep—just a few minutes after the Motor Square Garden marathon, six months old next Tuesday, closed at midnight on police orders following protests to City Council. There were left only seven contestants, apparently willing to dance forever for the $1,000 prize, today divided. These are Sun-Telegraph pictures.

THE END OF THE DANCE: A WHISTLE BLEW AND POLICE W ERE THERE TO SEE ITS ORDER TO STOP WAS UNDERSTOOD

SPINELLI FACES ITALIAN COURT

ROME, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Giuseppe Spinelli, wanted in Pittsburgh in connection with an inquiry into the gangster killing of the Volpe brothers, today gained a hearing before the ministry of justice.

The ministry began consideration of the case and there were unofficial indications that Spinelli's argument that he is an Italian citizen would be recognized.

This would mean that extradition would be refused and Spinelli would be tried in Italy if the United States requested that action and furnish adequate evidence.

Spinelli was arrested in his native town of Agropoli, near Salerno, November 23. Spinelli was the former acting mayor of Agropoli and went to the United States in 1925. He returned last September and declared he had been a loyal supporter of the Volpe brothers and was not involved in their death.

England Bans Visit By Mooney's Mother

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The International Labor Defense announced today that Mrs. Mary Mooney, aged mother of Tom Mooney, had been refused a visa to enter England by the British Consulate in Berlin.

Mrs. Mooney, who has been in Moscow attending the world congress of the International Red Aid, was scheduled to visit England and Ireland, the latter her birthplace, before returning to the United States.

Police Halt Marathon After 6-Month 'Grind'

7 Dancers Stagger Over Goal to Share Prize

Seven weary contestants, three of them young women, awoke in makeshift bedrooms in Motor Square Garden today to divide the $1,000 prize money which will be the major part of their reward for the six months' continuous dancing that was Joe Mazer's dance marathon until the police stopped it last midnight.

One of the biggest crowds that the marathon attracted was on hand to cheer and applaud when the whistle sent the staggering couples from the floor to end the grind which City Council heard compared to a Mexcain bullfight yesterday.

POLICE ESCORT

It was Mrs. John M. Phillips, civic leader, who made the bullfight comparison, and it was Mrs. Phillips who left the garden under a police escort last night after she had gone "to see the thing through." The crowd was noisy when she left.

What she witnessed during a previous visit to the dance grind made Mrs. Phillips "ashamed of her city," and that, with some other things she told Council, brought Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh to the Council chamber with the announcement that the marathon would be closed at midnight. It was.

Police were on hand to see that Walsh's order was carried out, but they were not needed. Mazer did not resent the closing order, and passed it off with:

"Well, it puts another 150 out of work."

Asked about the prize money, he replied:

"Well, they're too tired tonight; I'll split it among them tomorrow, and I'll probably have to put some to it myself—I don't know how much, but I'll put something to it."

BEGAN JUNE 6

June 6, when the dancing began, 31 couples were entered. Of these three and a half remained, the others dropping out for various reasons.

Those remaining at closing—surviving even a final six-hour spurt—were Vera Marchone, Edward Carter, Edward Bonach, Tony Altieri, Vere Mikus, Elmer Westley and Mary Parchuti.

When the closing order was circulated, many other places, including New Kensington and Homestead, offered invitations to continue the marathon, but the offers were refused by Mazer.

FORD CREDITS ABSTINENCE

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—(INS.)—Proudly attributing his speedy recovery from a major operation to "total abstinence from alcohol and tobacco" and moderation in diet, Henry Ford prepared today to greet close friends and newspapermen.

Ford's visitors today will be the first, other than his immediate family, since he submitted to an operation last Saturday for strangulated hernia and removal of a gangrenous appendix.

A bulletin at 10:45 a. m. today reported:

"Mr. Ford is steadily gaining strength. Temperature, pulse and respiration are normal."

In an interview, Dr. Roy D. McClure, chief hospital surgeon, who performed the operation, said Ford had no fear of it and submitted complacently. He added Mr. Ford would be in the hospital about 10 more days "if we can induce him to remain that long."

ROMANCE FOUND BY FIGURE IN MILLS MURDER

Daughter of Woman Slain With Pastor 'Hiding' in Phila.

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—Ten years is a long time, but Charlotte Mills today confessed it is not long enough to live down the fact that she was a central figure in the famous unsolved Hall-Mills murder mystery, back in 1922.

Discovered living here under an assumed name, the 28-year-old blonde daughter of Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, slain under a crabapple tree with her secret lover, the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, admitted she had been in Philadelphia since last August.

FINDS ROMANCE

She said she had been working as a companion to a middle-aged woman, and since coming here has met "the most wonderful man in the world" and that he already has asked her to become his wife. She said:

"There is an understanding between us, but as yet the engagement is not what you would call official. The chief bar t serious thoughts of marriage the depression, my friend n having steady employment the present time."

Miss Mills, now mature and different from the girl of 18 used to hoonob with the newspaper people during the two tria following the murder of her mother, has confessed her identity to "Harry" (her boy friend's first name) but has withheld it from her employer.

EFFECTS OF TRIAL

Reminded that her appearance had not changed much since the days of the trials, Miss Mills laughed and said:

"I'm glad to hear that, but really, I feel at least years older.

"Once a person gets mixed up in such a sensational case, it is hard to live a quiet life, although I had hoped to do so here in Philadelphia."

WOMAN SPIRIT MEDIUM HELD

Mrs. Maxine Chamberlin, 33, self-styled pastor of the "Spiritualist Church of Inspiration," 735 East Ohio street, was held for court charged with fortune telling by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Station today.

Policewomen testified they had received an anonymous tip that Mrs. Chamberlin could tell them where the slayers of the Volpe brothers could be found. She, however, told them she didn't know anything about the Volpes, they said.

After paying $1 each, the policewomen testified Mrs. Chamberlin told their fortunes.

Magistrate Rothenberg asked:

"If your spirits tell you so much why didn't they tell you you were to be arrested?"

She replied:

"They did tell me."

PASTOR'S WIFE LOSES IN SUIT

SOMERSET, Pa., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Mazie Durbin Whipple, of Washington, deserted wife of the Rev. Carl Whipple, Methodist Episcopal minister, today had lost the first round in her battle with Mrs. Arabella Glessner, defendant in a $30,000 alienation of affections suit for the alleged theft of the minister's affections. The costs were placed on Mrs. Whipiple.

A morality charge brought by Mrs. Whipple was ignored by the Somerset County grand jury. Mrs. Whipple had charged the offense occurred while the Glessners and Whipples occupied a double house in Berlin, where Mr. Whipple was pastor.

Last August Mr. Whipple disappeared from the home of his wife's parents in Washington, a day or two after Mrs. Glessner had apparently started back to her Berlin home, following a visit with the Whipples. Mrs. Glessner did not return to her home in Berlin until several weeks later. She said she had not seen Mr. Whipple during the interval.

The minister was last reported in California.

Society Girl Collapses At Trial of Horseman

point of passivity, the tall brunette sobbed and cried and held her head in her hands when Charles Finkelstein, Homewood's attorney, pressed her for details.

RECESS ORDERED

Judge George H. Taylor, Jr., called a recess, and the girl made her way in a state of agitation to the counsel room reserved for her.

As she went, Homewood followed. He was unnoticed in the crush of curious spectators who followed, but in the anonymity of the crowd his face reflected great concern. He fingered his cravat nervously. He looked embarrassed.

Finkelstein had been asking the girl where the alleged betrayal took place. The girl said:

"I don't remember."

"Is your mind a perfect blank?"

Losing control, she cried:

"No—I don't want to remember! Please! —"

Then her Negro nurse leaped up and ran toward her.

ATTORNEY UPHELD

After the girl had gone, Finkelstein asked for a ruling as to whether his line of questioning were proper. The judge agreed that he was within his rights.

But the defense moved for a mistrial, declaring the girl's collapse had prejudiced the jury. Judge Taylor said:

"It is the evidence in the case which will count and the demonstration will be disregarded. May I have your word on this?"

The jurors solemnly nodded.

Judge Taylor denied the motion, and Miss Gibson came back to the stand, still weeping, to continue her testimony.

Finkelstein continued where he had left off. She answered every question with her eyes on the ceiling, obviously outraged at the kind of questions asked. She seemed to steel herself against the ordeal with great will power.

JURORS EMBARRASSED

The jurors, obviously embarrassed, looked away from her. The courtroom was still, with a shocked silence.

For half an hour this kind of testimony went on. Homewood looked unembarrassed, but his eyes narrowed as he looked at the girl.

Before her collapse she had admitted she had been engaged to Homewood and permitted him liberties without her parents' knowledge.

She said she would even marry him without their knowledge.

The picture of her own innocence was further delineated as she admitted she knew till recently "only vaguely" how children were born.

But she knew liberties such as she had indulged in were "sinful and wrong," she admitted cooly.

No penitent note was in her voice. She looked into the face of Finkelstein as if he were talking of some impersonal matter.

She has never read a book involving sex nor discussed the subject with her girl friends, she testified.

Letter Shows Norma's Help to Jessel

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(Universal)—A letter purportedly written by Norma Talmadge to her bankers guaranteeing payment by George Jessel, stage comedian of $82,500 to his former wife, Mrs Florence Courtney Jessel, today had been included in an affidavit filed in Supreme Court.

The affidavit was among those filed by Frank L. Ippolito in a dispute involved in the dissolution of the law firm in which he was connected with Theodore J. Lessor.

Jessel said Miss Talmadge, the wife of Joseph Schenck, film magnate, had aided him in putting up security that he could pay Mrs Jessel $100,000 as a divorce settlement.

The letter attributed to the actress was addressed to the Guaranty Trust Company. It said:

"This will introduce to you Frank L. Ippolito, my attorney.

"An agreement is being executed as a part of which the payment of two sums in the amounts of $27,500 and $55,000 must be guaranteed.

"Consider this letter as a complete authorization to issue such guarantee in your name and to hold my account and bonds in my name as security against loss for the guarantee which you will give to the person demanding same."

The affidavits disclosed Jessel made an initial payment of $25,000 to his wife and $2,500 to the attorneys. Another payment of $27,500 is due December 8, toward which Jessel has banked $26,000.

Doctors Threaten Strik To Block Socialization

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—(INS.)—"Specious arguments" favoring socialization of medical practice made in New York last Tuesday were met today by Philadelphia physicians with the forthright threat of a "doctors' strike" and unionization of the medical profession rather than submit to the proposed socialization.

Dr. Seth A. Brumm, at a meeting of the Philadelphia County Medical Society, warned:

"The doctors are going to strike. They are going to walk out of the free dispensaries if abuses are not stopped."

The society adopted a formal resolution opposing socialization. It said:

"Any effort to socialize medicine and standardize the commodity will work incalculable harm to the public."

The socialization plan proposed by the National Committee on Medical Care in a majority report recommends medical care by organized groups of physicians and their associates, compensated on a group or insurance basis.

Abolition of the family doctor would result from such socialization, the local committee on medical economics charged.

JANE THURSTON SAYS HARRIS BEAT HER

PARTED MANY TIMES

"I got excited and mother got excited and everybody got disgusted and left. Mother tried to interfere and he pushed her and wouldn't let her do anything.

"Two days later Mr. Harris wanted to make amends and show he was all right. He asked mother to invite the same people to another party and she did. But he got drunk again. I asked him to stop. He hit me in the face with his fist and knocked me down. Then he pulled me by the hair and swore."

Jane estimated that she had left her husband six or seven times, returning all but once because when Harry "sobered up he was awfully sorry."

Attorney Harry Estep asked Jane how many black eyes or other evidences of physical abuse she exhibited. Jane replied:

"Quite a few. I couldn't name the number."

Judge Gray saked:

"Has he made any amends?"

Jane testified:

"Yes, but I found out that he didn't keep his promises."

HOLDS FRIEIND INSULTED

Jane told of the incident which caused her to depart the Harris domicile for the seventh and last time, last May:

"A girl friend of mine was visiting us at the Schenley Arms. He started drinking and hit me again. He blackened my eye. The next day his brother, John, had a reception. John had just been married. We went from there to the Arms. Harry invited some friends over. He struck me and ordered my friend out and called her names. I told him I wouldn't stand any more. I went to my mother's at Beechhurst, L. I."

Then there was the night in the Hotel Gibson in Cincinnati. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hanson, members of the Thurston show, were there. Jane said:

"We were playing backgammon and Harry criticized my playing. Then he and I played. We put the board between us. He criticized my playing again and threw the board up to the ceiling. Glass broke. I sat on the bed. He threw a glass at me and then a ginger ale bottle. I ducked.

HARRIS NOT IN COURT

"He came over to me and hit the wall so hard he cut his head. He tore my dress and said I wasn't good enough to wear the dress his mother had given me. He pulled off my clothes and tore my underwear and left me standing there in front of Mr. and Mrs. Hanson without any clothes on. I pulled a blanket around me. When Mr. Hanson objected, Mr. Harris hit him."

Mrs. Hanson and the Thurston chauffeur were Jane's corroborating witnesses. Harris was not in the courtroom and did not contest the suit.

And now it's show business again for Jane, who plans to rejoin her father's troupe.

She and Harris were married a total of three times—twice in civil ceremonies, once in the church.

Jane's formal charge is cruelty and indignities.

Woman, Child Die In Ten-Story Plunge

DENVER, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Police said a woman who registered as Mrs. J. B. Miller, of Colorado Springs, threw her 5-year-old daughter from a smoke-filled room on the tenth floor of the Cosmopolitan Hotel and then leaped to her death last night. The child was injured fatally.

Accused as 'Voodoo' By Invalid's Mother

Promised to Cure Her Child, Says Crafton Woman

An alleged voodoo doctor was in jail today, awaiting trial on charges of false pretense, blackmail and conspiracy, following arrest by Constable George Lane, of Crafton.

Sylvia Dorato, about 41, was committed to jail by Justice of the Peace J. W. Watson, of Ingram, after Lane had investigated charges by Mrs. Joseph Utman, of Fountain street, Crafton, that he had obtained money by promising to cure her invalid daughter.

Mrs. Anna Caslo, who Lane charges was an accomplice of Dorato, has been released on bail, he says.

SEWER BLASTS INJURE 12

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Staccato blasts from sewer and gas mains ripped through six square miles of Northern Montreal during the night, spreading terror among householders, but only 12 persons were slightly injured.

Damage was general, however. One three-story building collapsed. Firemen quenched several blazes, and five fire fighters were slightly hurt rescuing citizens.

Manholes flew high in the air, accompanied by sudden flares of bluish yellow flame, tearing up miles of street paving. When a gas station blew up, the manager was thrown 35 feet through a door. He was sent to a hospital.

Remarkable escapes were recounted in the wreck of the three-story building. Following the first upheaval, two sharp blasts in succession sent an ice cream store and two flats above literally into the air, and the building crumpled.

Rescuers dragged six persons from the burning wreckage.

ELY'S CONTRACT TEAM LEADS

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Ely Culbertson's contract foursome led a field of 84 players into the last lap of the national team championship today. The three-day competition for the Chicago trophy is one of the principal events of the American Bridge League's sixth annual tournament.

Culbertson himself did not join his team until yesterday's second session, after which the quartet led its section with 36-match points on 56 boards.

In the National Pair tournament, which is being held simultaneously, Leo Bachrach and L. J. Schwarz, of New York, led the big field of 94 twosomes at the end of the two qualifying rounds, which wound up in the early hours today. They had 224½ points.

The defending champions, P. Sims and Willard S. Karn, ranked second with 221 points. Maurice Maschke and Samuel Rockwell, of Cleveland, were third with 214.

RETAILERS ASK TAX SURVEY

HARRISBURG, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Retailers' Association today had obtained "tentative approval" from Gov. Pinchot for a survey of the first four months' operation of the state emergency 1 per cent sales tax.

A delegation headed by W. H. Hager, of Lancaster, president of the association, asked the Governor to support a legislative move, early in the 1933 session, to require Secretary of Revenue Leon D. Metzger to report on the tax for the period September-December, inclusive. The tax continues effective until February 28, 1933, and is payable April 1, the proceeds to be used for unemployment relief.

The report is desired by the association to show the extent to which merchants throughout the state understand the levy and are meeting its requirements.

With Hager at the conference were Arthur C. Kaufmann, of McCreery & Co.; Wilmer M. Jacoby, of the Retail Merchants Association of Pittsburgh; W. C. Heckman, Johnstown, and George P. Gable, Altoona.

Men and women prominent in many walks of life attended the funeral today of Federal Judge William Henry Seward Thomson, retired, who died Tuesday night. Speer, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church, Erie, formerly of the Third United Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh.

The Amen Corner, of which he had been president, at a special meeting passed resolutions and tributes to the memory of Judge Thomson were also paid by judges of the county, state and federal courts and others. His death was announced in Federal Court by Judge R. M. Gibson and in Common Pleas, Orphans and County courts by Attorney Robert T. Houlden.

27 MORE LOSE COUNTY JOBS

Effective today, 27 more employes of the County Department of Public Works were removed from the county payroll. They received their notification late yesterday after the Commissioners had approved a list prepared by F. J. Chester, head of the department. The Bureau of Bridge Construction lost 10 engineers, supervisors, transitmen, rodmen and axmen. A stenographer and two clerks were dropped from the rolls of the division of contracts and a clerk and a bookkeeper from the bureau of accounts.

MUSIC

Sigma Alpha Iota

CARNEGIE TECH

Mr. Lissfelt

Alpha Mu Chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota Fraternity, a society of professional women musicians, gave its annual recital in the exhibition rooms at Carnegie Tech last night. One of the fine activities of this group of women is to look after young and aspiring artists, to give them an opportunity to be heard. They play and sing excellent music.

Last night's program was for those only who worship at the classic shrine and there was not too much of it. Marion Swan played the Peethoven Emperor Concerto for piano with Selmar Jansen at the second piano.

Ferna Young, coloratura soprano, offered two beautiful old English airs—"Have You Heard But a White Lily Grow" and "Shepherd, Thy Demeanour Vary." Kathryn Kahr played the Sarabande, Double and Bourree from Bach's D Major Suite, and Rose Aiello, Jeannette Fischel, and Mildred Cramer closed the program with Bach's Concerto in D Minor for two violins and piano. The musicale showed real sincere application of good talents.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

STOP COLDS QUICK

—in the Dry Stage!

A cold should be treated promptly the first 24 hours. This is why: A cold ordinarily passes through three stages. The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Once a cold gets beyond the first stage it is far more difficult to relieve.

Relief comes quickly if you take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine immediately — because this cold remedy does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels—kills the cold germs and fever in the system — relieves the headache and grippy feeling—tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

No worry about what you're taking when you take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. Does not upset the stomach or make the head ring. For years Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine has been the stand-by of thousands in the treatment of colds and grippe. You're playing safe when you take this famous cold tablet! Every drug store in America sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Beware of substitutes.

STOVES NEEDED FOR COXTOWN RESIDENTS

Since the Sun-Telegraph renewed its drive for funds for Father Cox, the response to his calls for food, clothing and money have increased in a gratifying way. Telling the public about his plight and about his aid to the thousands of jobless reawakened a spirit of giving, and the "going" for the "father of the jobless" has been made much easier.

This does not mean that he does not need plenty of help. Conditions are getting no better among the hundreds and hundreds who come to him every day for their daily bread and he needs more and more assistance in the way of food, clothing and money than ever.

Yesterday he told the Sun-Telegraph that he would like to get some old wood-burning or coal burning stoves for the residents of Coxtown. He'll send for them if you telephone to Old St. Patrick's —Grant 4860. And Father Cox would also like to have someone donate or loan a small automobile truck to expedite the picking up of the smaller donations.

These are some of the reasons why the Sun-Telegraph has again inaugurated a subscription drive for the benefit of the Father Cox unemployment relief fund. Every subscription that comes in on the special blank on this page or on one of the subscription cards being distributed by Father Cox and his assistants, brings a substantial cash commission to the fund.

MILITIA AT MINE FIRED UPON

WILDER, Tenn., Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The troubled Fentress County mine strike area was stirred again today as two national guardsmen on sentry duty at a railroad bridge reported they were fired on from ambush.

Another factor contributed to tension in the coal field were violence and property destruction have been frequent in recent months. It was a temporary injunction barring 104 specific persons from the property of the Fentress Coal and Coke Company.

Named among these was Byron Graham, president of the local union of the United Mine Workers of America.

Meanwhile, the Patterson mine at Davidson, where a tipple was burned several weeks ago, announced plans to resume operations Monday with a wage scale similar to that in force at other mines at the area now employing nonunion labor. The average pay would be around $2.40 a day, it was said.

Auto Being Hunted In Hit-Run Mystery

An automobile which North Side police say may have figured in a hit-run accident was being sought today. Joseph Ravenstern, of 252 Alpine avenue, attendant at the Marie Gas Company station in East Ohio street and Cedar avenue, told police he saw blood on the machine as he serviced it. The driver appeared nervous, Ravenstern said.

Prisoner Attempts To End Life in Cell

Stanley Chowski, 50, of 181 Forty-third street, was in St. Francis Hospital today following an alleged attempt to hang himself last night in a Forty-third Street Police Station cell several hours after his arrest on complaint of his wife, Stella, who said her husband threatened her with a hatchet.

Chowski, found hanging by a shirt noose, was semi-conscious when taken to the hospital.

Club Proprietor Flees Dry Raid

The proprietor of a club on the second and third floors of a building in South Diamond street, South Side, was being sought by prohibition agents today following a raid on the club last night, which yielded the agents two half-[illegible]rrels of beer and a pint of gin, [illegible] said.

In a house in McKee street, the agents reported finding 72 pints of beer, 12 pints of gin and a pint of whisky. Two men were arrested.

DARROW DENIES JOINING CHURCH

Unless Clarence Darrow completely loses his reason he will not join any religious order, he said today in reply to a report that he had joined a church.

The noted criminal attorney will meet Judge Michael A. Musmanno here in debate of "Does Man Live Again?", Monday evening, December 12, at Carnegie Music Hall.

Proceeds will be used by Pittsburgh's afternoon newspapers for relief funds. Early requests for seats have indicated a large attendance.

Replying to a recent report that he had joined church, Darrow said:

"I have never joined any church, and do not know what method is employed. Unless I completely lose my reason I will never join any religious order."

HOOVER HINTED FOR SALES TAX

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—In an eleventh-hour drive to shave budget figures to the last dollar needed, President Hoover today called in advisors for a final check-over of his virtually completed fiscal message to Congress.

Slashes in the requested appropriations for conducting the government will be drastic.

Although the President has remained silent, there have been persistent reports that he will recommend a sales tax to increase federal revenue, and may suggest a flat pay cut for government employes in an effort to decrease the deficit now risen above the $746,670,000 mark.

Latest figures made available to the President by Secretary Mills show that under the billion dollar tax bill enacted last year, there has been an increase of slightly over $80,000,000 in miscellaneous collections, as compared to the same period last year, but income tax collections have dropped and federal spendings since July have totaled $1,424,157,740, against total collections of $677,487,109.

Don't take calomel!

HERE'S NEW HEALTH FOR YOUR LIVER

Now banish bad breath, pimples, constipation; feel like a million!

That tired, frowsy feeling in the morning, that "dark-brown" taste in the mouth—if you would banish them and win back buoyant health, don't expect relief from salts, mineral oil, or candy and chewing-gum laxatives.

For such remedies only move the bowels. While chances are, you're one of the thousands suffering from sluggish liver, which does not yield sufficient bile—causing pimples, blemishes, headaches, bad breath and a general run-down feeling.

What you need is something which acts thoroughly but harmlessly upon the liver. And in Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets you will find that "something," which stimulates the bile flow.

A successful substitute for calomel, these famous tablets are compounded of pure vegetable ingredients, and have been praised for years by millions.

To get and keep the bile flowing freely—correcting constipation, skin troubles, and win back that "fine-and-dandy" feeling of youth—go to your druggist for Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets today. 15c, 30c, 60c.

COUGHING strains the heart. Thoxine positively stops coughs in 15 minutes or money back. A safe, pleasant prescription, not a cough syrup. 35c all druggists.

AMERICA RANKS 4TH IN AIR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The United States ranks fourth in air power.

This was remarked upon today in the annual report of F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for air.

While he did not name the nations stronger, aviation reference works showed France leading, with Italy second and Great Britain third.

Davison based his estimate of American strength on the full power this country could employ in a particular operation where armies, navies and air forces would be used to full capacity.

RITES FOR SLAIN GIRL HELD

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Dec. 1.—(INS.)—Private funeral services were held this afternoon in the flower-decked parlor of her home in Newtown for pretty Frances Rempfer, 15, shot to death by an admirer, who allegedly confessed the crime.

The Rev. William A. Hawley, pastor of the First Baptist Church, where Frances taught a class of young people, and the Rev. F. W. Gutbub, pastor of the Newtown Episcopal Church, where Frances sang in the choir, officiated.

Meanwhile a new angle appeared in the case against Charles Arnwine, 25, twice married, and estranged from his second wife. Stacy C. Brown, Newtown undertaker, denied that the girl had been murdered at the time or in the manner set forth by Arnwine in his purported confession.

Arnwine allegedly said he shot the girl to death on the night of November 13 as Frances lifted her lips to his. Her body was found on November 26, but Brown declared it was his opinion that she was killed the night of November 22, the day before her father had Arnwine arrested.

21 Cents Loot in Downtown Holdup

Twenty-one cents was the haul of two bandits who entered the Thom McAn Shoe Store, 411 Smithfield street, at 7:30 a. m. today and threatened the manager, Joseph Zevo, with a gun. A safe containing several hundred dollars at the rear of the store was not disturbed.

Zevo had just opened the store when two men, described shabbily dressed, entered. One pointed a gun at Zevo, while the other said:

"Keep quiet and let us have your money."

Zevo said they were welcome to all he had and produced two thin dimes and a penny. One of the men grabbed the change and both fled.

Short-Weight Case Prisoner Released

Judge James H. Gray, of Common Pleas Court, has released Elmer A. Mullen, of Methyl street, Beechview, from jail. Attorney Joseph I. Winslow, representing Mullen, told the court his client was arrested on an alleged charge of short weighting a customer in the Star Market, where Mullen is employed, and that Mullen's name did not appear in the information. Mullen was araigned before Alderman Thomas M. Geary, November 29, and fined $50 or five days in jail.

'LOCAL' TAXES UP 62 PCT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Universal.)—State and local taxes mounted sharply from 1922 to 1931, while federal taxes decreased, the House Ways and Means Sub-committee on double taxation states in its report soon to be made public, it was learned today.

The total per capita tax burden was $77.53 for 1931, as against $68.27 for 1922. The report says:

> "There has been a decrease in the federal tax burden since 1922, but this has been more than offset by the increase in local taxes. The city per capita tax burden in 1922 was approximately $14.97, as against $24.26 for 1931, an increase of over 62 per cent."

The sub-committee was created to guide legislators in working out a more scientific system. Some 326 instances of double taxation were found. A notable instance is the gasoline levy.

Lost 33 Lbs. in 4 Weeks

"I have tried many things for reducing but nothing to equal BonKora. It took off 33 pounds in 4 weeks. I have no more headaches or blood pressure spells either. I am 63 years old and now I do all my own work."—Mrs. Marion Murphy, 7149 Parnell Ave. Chicago, Ill.

STAGE STARS :-: Opera Company In 'Merry Widow' :-: ON THE AIR

Moran-Mack And Merman With Rudy

An hour of drama, comedy and music by an all-star Broadway cast headed by Ethel Merman and Moran and Mack is presented by Rudy Vallee during his "Sunshine Hour" over WCAE at 8 o'clock tonight. Francis Lederer, the first matinee idol in a decade, and Patricia Collinge, noted dramatic artist, also appear on the program.

Miss Merman

Miss Merman, star of "Take a Chance," new musical comedy which opened on Broadway last week, offers a group of songs from that show in the "torch" manner, and Moran and Mack, famed blackface comedy team, present a comedy sketch. Lederer and Miss Collinge portray a scene from "Autumn Crocus," the dramatic success in which they are currently appearing.

The Aborn Light Opera Company's presentation of "The Merry Widow" inaugurates, tonight at 10, on WJAS, the series of operatic works to be offered throughout the season as the Thursday night feature of the Five Star Theater. Leading roles in the opera are portrayed by Gladys Baxter and Vivian Hart, sopranos; Roy Cropper, tenor; Ed Nell, baritone, and William Philbrick and Hal Forde, comedians, under the direction of Milton Aborn.

Joey Schaffler's orchestra, absent from the ether waves for several weeks, returns to the air with a 20-minute program of popular novelty arrangements on WJAS at 6:40.

* * *

Program Pointers

Brian McDonald, tenor of radio, screen and stage fame and former WJAS announcer, who has been emsee-ing in Warner Brothers theaters and is now featured in that capacity at the Nixon Restaurant, opens a series of two-a-night guest appearances with the Schafer-Englert orchestra over WWSW tonight. The broadcasts are scheduled each night at 8:30 and 11 o'clock . . . Georgie Price appears briefly as Napoleon preliminary to his interpretation of "Who Ate Napoleons With Josephine?" on WJAS at 7:45.

Mr. McDonald

The story of how a broken guitar string was responsible for the expose of the Hodson Slater gold mine hoax during the early Death Valley mining days is listed at 9 on KDKA.

Jules Bledsoe's interpretations of "Ploddin' Along" and "Great Day," and Lanny Ross singing "Alone Together" and "Poor Pierrot" are WCAE highlights at 9 during "Show Boat."

"Thurston and the Javanese Priestess," a dramatization in which modern magic combats the ancient incantations and sacrificial rites of the Island of Java, is KDKA's 8:45 presentation.

Attired in typical pirate dress and brandishing his trusty cutlass, Jack Pearl, the modern Baron Munchausen, unfolds several of his most blood-chilling tales of pirate days on the briny deep over WCAE at 10. George Olsen provides the "Magic Carpet" rhythm.

GLOBE-TROTTING

With Louis L. Kaufman
Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

Hello Ladies and Gentlemen—

When Winsor McCay drew that attention-arresting cartoon for the March of Events section last Sunday he didn't know that he was going to puzzle so many Globe Trotters, but he did. You saw the cartoon and then read the article and when it suggested that you write your representative, many of you paused and wondered:

"Who is my representative?"

* * *

Well, of course your representative depends upon what congressional district you live in and that's something else to wonder about.

The present representatives are Edmund F. Erk, whose district is the north side of the Allegheny River; P. J. Sullivan, elected from the Lawrenceville and East End; Harry Estep from a large portion of the old city and the South Side; Clyde Kelly, whose votes come from Swissvale, McKeesport and all intermediate points, and Guy E. Campbell with everything south of the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers outside the city. They can be addressed at the House Office Building in Washington. They serve until March, 1933.

* * *

Any new congressmen elected last November will not sit in Congress until December, 1933, unless a special session is called.

Right now Twing Brooks has an unofficial lead over Erk, who is contesting in a number of districts. Michael Muldowney will replace P. J. Sullivan; Matthew Dunn has gained Guy Campbell's seat, and Henry Ellenbogen was the choice of the electorate over Harry Estep. Clyde Kelly was reelected. The senators are David A. Reed and James J. Davis.

* * *

The boys at Engine Company No. 2 received an unexpected present the other day. A couple cases of cheese fell off a passing truck. Although they may have a weakness for it, they will hold same for the driver for a reasonable length of time.

* * *

Clarence Scheid—Your suggestion has merit and will follow it up.

A Reader—Wilbur F. Maxwell is executive secretary of the Welfare Fund. His office address is 702 Chamber of Commerce Building.

* * *

A new voice has been heard in the so far private radio feud between Mrs. Walters and myself regarding the merits of Helen Rowland's argument that the women have all the say in the matrimonial game. James Greenwood, the radio operator, agrees with no one. He maintains that the girls do the choosing, but the men don't always fall.

Why should I argue over love? This column gives me enough worries.

Jack Denny Features Broadway Hits

Jack Denny features "Riddle Me This," from the current Broadway hit, "Ballyhoo," "Here It Is Monday," "My Buddy" and "Don't Tell a Soul," with Evan Evans, baritone, as soloist, on WJAS at 8:45.

Listening In On Radio Gossip

Irene Wicker says she got her greatest thrill when she flew from Chicago to New York and went to 17 night clubs in 24 hours . . . Frank Crumit finds that being Shepherd of the Lambs Club is a full-sized job . . . and is wondering how he'll find time for an occasional visit to his home in Springfield, Mass., or for even a meal in town with his wife, Julia Sanderson.

Miss Wicker

Story . . . Just after the war, Willie Howard was approached by Philip Grau, a German comedian left destitute by the conflict, for a loan. Willie staked him and Grau made a comeback . . . Several years later the comedian died and Willie was named sole beneficiary of his $12,000 estate.

George M.—Riggs and Moke are on the air from WCAE each Monday and Thursday at 7 p. m. Y'welcome.

They say . . . that the McCravy Brothers never made as much money as network artists they are now on a one-station program in Connecticut . . . that Arnold Johnson uses more outlandish and successful novelty effects in his orchestra than any other baton-waver . . . and that John Mitchell, of Carson Robinson's "Pioneers," looks like a tough cowboy when you put him under a 10-gallon hat—but with a mustache and horn-rimmed glasses he looks like a graduate student or a young dentist.

Add tongue-twisters: When Kenneth Roberts, CBS announcer, tried to say "A sluggish system seems to . . ." on a recent program, his faculties of speech double-crossed him. The result: "A sluggish slystem sleems . . ."

The versatility of Jack Smart, who's noted for his impersonations of famed personalities on the "March of Time," was put to a new test recently when he was asked to imitate a small dog on Fred Allen's Revue. He carried out his assignment with usual perfection, but the sight of a hefty actor emitting the sounds of a tiny pup provoked the studio audience to gales of laughter which nearly disrupted the program.

Uncle Bob Reads Comics to Betty

Lively chatter by Uncle Bob and Betty as they read the Sun-Telegraph comic pages and vocal contributions from the juvenile portion of the set-up are heard on WCAE at 6 tonight.

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, relays the latest news flashes to WCAE and WJAS listeners at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. today. His schedule tomorrow is identical with the exception of the 2:15 broadcast, listed on WCAE only.

27 IN 'NUMBERS' RAID GIVE BAIL

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 1.—Twenty-seven members of an alleged "numbers" ring, including four women, a Negro preacher and an ex-policeman, said to have been plying their trade among school children in Monessen, were at liberty today on bail following their arrest by state police late yesterday.

State police said a house raided on the outskirts of Monessen in Rostraver Township was the "numbers" headquarters for Westmoreland County and the Monongahela Valley. All of those arrested were in one room awaiting the "payoff," police said. The money, $100 in pennies was awaiting return to main headquarters in Pittsburgh, police reported.

Fred Copper, 45, Monessen, in charge of the lottery, according to police, was arrested. Others arrested, all from Monessen, were: E. A. HEARST URGES SHIPBUILDING

KEARNEY, N. J., Dec. 1.—(Universal.)—William Randolph Hearst voiced the need for a powerful merchant marine at the launching here of the new Grace liner Santa Elena, last of the ships built under provisions of the Jones-White act.

In a telegram to the Grace line, read over the radio during the launching ceremony in the yards of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company yesterday, Mr. Hearst said:

> "Every American is glad to hear of the extension of the merchant marine of our country. Since the foundation of the nation, our merchant marine has played an important part in the development of the country in times of peace and has been the basis of our success at sea in times of war.
>
> "God forbid that a war should come upon us in these days, but if it should, a great merchant marine would be a powerful adjunct to our diminished navy in protecting our shores from invasion."

WILD CARGO ⁘ By FRANK BUCK

With EDWARD ANTHONY

CHAPTER XLII.

In characteristic fashion, Mike lost no time in making friends. There was a banker's wife on board who fell especially hard for the little heart-bruiser from the Siamese border. When she learned my business she lost no time in announcing that she wanted a cub just like Mike for a pet. Would I take her order? A small order like that is always a nuisance, but why argue with the lady? Once I infuriated a woman who, with much ceremony, ordered a monkey of me, by giving her the name of a dealer to whom I'd just delivered 500 and suggesting that she take the matter up with him.

I figured that the banker's wife would change her mind about wanting a tiger cub if she spent a little time with Mike. Mike was a mighty tame tiger cub as tiger cubs go, but with the passing of each day he was growing friskier and rapidly approaching the stage where a novice would not find him easy to handle. The third day out I was nominated for a poker game and it struck me that it wouldn't be a bad idea to turn Mike over to the banker's wife while I tried to earn an honest penny at jackpots. To this arrangement the lady readily agreed.

The game was at its height when the banker's wife, Mike in her arms, came tearing into the salon looking as if she'd been in a hair-pulling match. "Take him!" she shrieked. "He's gone mad!"

CAUSES DAMAGE

"Set him down," said the captain of the ship, who saw nothing alarming in the situation. Besides he probably had a good hand and didn't wanted to be bothered.

"He won't let me put him down," wailed the woman, still holding the cub.

By this time I had gone to the lady's aid for I knew just what she was up against. One of Mike's tricks was to resist being set on the floor when he felt like being held. He would twist and squirm and pull his hind legs clear of the floor, holding on with his front claws. Only a person experienced in handling animals knows what to do in such a situation. I soon got Mike away from the lady and sold him the idea of sitting calmly beside my chair.

Not until I had done this did I get a good look at the banker's wife. The upper part of her dress, where she wore a silk flower, was torn. I had forgotten to warn the lady that Mike was a poetic lad and always made a bee-line for flowers, real or artificial.

It seems that Mike had also managed to drag along with him a Spanish shawl he had found in the lady's room—and while it wasn't exactly ruined when I disentangled him, some of the flowers on it looked a bit the worse for wear.

INTERRUPTS GAME

Announcing, in a manner plainly suggesting I was being punished, that she had decided to cancel her order for a tiger cub, the banker's wife made a haughty exit. I was sorry the lady's clothes were messed, but I managed to be philosophic about it. It's no use trying to tell women not to make pets of tigers and such. I've never been able to make one listen. They've got to find out for themselves.

We went on with our poker-playing. And then Mike did me a real favor. He got restless and decided to jump up on my lap, in the process spilling the cards in my hand and those of the man next to me in all directions. Then, for good measure, he slapped the captain's cards all over the place and succeeded in creating a misdeal.

At the time I was in pretty deep on a four-flush that I had romantically tried to fill—I was looking for a spade and drew a heart—and I suddenly found myself liking Mike more than ever. The colored design on the backs of the cards probably reminded him of flowers. More than ever I felt that both man and beast should have a real interest—I might say a violent interest—in nature's pretty blossoms.

MIKE GETS BOUQUET

When I arrived in Manila I arranged to have Mike share my room with me at the hotel. Aside from howling when I left him alone, he behaved like a gentleman. Antrim, the perfect host, assured me that the guests would get used to the noise but I finally insisted on moving Mike to a shed behind the hotel. There he was sought out by people who had heard about him and again he was enjoying wide popularity.

The climax of the series of festivities that week was the New Year's party in the Manila Hotel that Antrim gave for his close friends. A big round table was set for 16 and beautifully decorated with flowers.

Just as we were about to sit down for supper a member of the party who was very fond of Mike suggested that the tiger cub be placed on the table as a sort of centerpiece.

"Not with all those flowers around," I warned. "He'll go for 'em."

"Let's give him his own private bouquet to play with," this friend of Mike's persisted. We decided to try the experiment and curiously enough, it worked. Mike was fairly quiet, occasionally slapping his bouquet with needless violence, but staying where we placed him, which was all we asked.

He got a bit out of hand when one of the guests tried to give him a drink of champagne, sending the glass skimming across the table with a slap of the paw, but we soon quieted him down to studying and mutilating his posies.

All went well until the lights were turned off for a minute at midnight and a terrific din started. The horns, ratchets and other noise-making devices of the guests at the table, and the shouting of the crowds in the street, and the ringing of bells and the screeching of ships' whistles in the harbor were too much for Mike. Whereupon he started a riot. Not one of your puny little riots. A real one.

LOTS OF EXCITEMENT

In record time he upset glasses and bottles and sent dishes crashing to the floor. He leaped from screaming guest to screaming guest (no one likes to have even a tiger cub suddenly land on him in the dark) until the place was in an uproar.

The confusion was increased by the efforts of at least five people to reach the lights in a hurry. In their haste they bowled each other over, also the waiter who had been posted at the switch—and a full two minutes elapsed before the lights were on again.

What a scene greeted our eyes! One of the most touching of the casualties was a dignified dowager who lay sprawled on the floor. She had caught her foot in a champagne bucket and had gone over in a heap.

Four or five dresses were ruined — but no dispositions. Antrim's guests were all close friends and they took Mike's antics good-naturedly.

Mike, no longer content with his bouquet, was galloping around the table, slapping all the flowers in sight. I gathered him up and took him out to his place in the shed, and Manila's historic New Year's riot came to an end.

Mike, alas, met a very inglorious death. The victim of too much rich food given him by foolish visitors, he developed intestinal trouble and died shortly after I left Manila for Borneo. I had left him at the hotel, planning to pick him up on my way home from Singapore.

But don't think I no longer see Mike. He is a nice little rug in Antrim's quarters at the hotel, and whenever I visit that king of good sports I always make a point of saying hello to little Mike on the floor. It's always a sad experience, too, for I loved the little cuss and I've never seen a tiger cub like him since.

Have fewer COLDS all year

Get $3 worth of protection for $1 against stubborn winter colds

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC is 3 times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes 3 times as far. And whether you buy the 25c, 50c, or $1 size, you still get 3 times as much for your money.

YOU may be attracted by price-cuts on ordinary antiseptics. But don't be misled. No price-cut can equal the saving Pepsodent Antiseptic brings you. For Pepsodent is three times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics—by adding water you make it go three times as far—get three times as much for your money and greater assurance of escaping stubborn sore throat colds.

Two kinds of antiseptics

Remember, there really are only two leading kinds of mouth antiseptics on the market. In one group is the mouth antiseptic that must be used full strength to be effective. In the other group is Pepsodent Antiseptic, utterly safe if used full strength, yet powerful enough to be diluted with two parts of water and still kill germs within 10 seconds.

Use Pepsodent for safety

Don't fool yourself by diluting old-type antiseptics. Your health is too important —also, consider the importance of a pure, sweet breath. Choose the antiseptic that kills germs even when it is diluted. Insist on Pepsodent Antiseptic — and be sure! Be safe—and safeguard your health.

IMPURE BREATH
(Halitosis)

The amazing results of Pepsodent Antiseptic in fighting sore throat colds prove its effectiveness in checking Bad Breath (Halitosis). Remember, Pepsodent is 3 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics. Remember, even when diluted with water it still kills germs.

CIPHER 'ORDER IN DIPLOMACY'

Cipher No. 18

"An Order in Diplomacy."

This is a message in a supposedly difficult cipher used by many big corporations for delicate international transactions. It is really easy for a beginner to solve within an hour if the hints in the accompanying article are followed. The solution to this cipher will be printed Wednesday.

Here we go—into the big stuff.

"An order in diplomacy" is today's problem for the cipher fans.

It is the sort which is sent over the radio and cable to our representatives abroad during times of emergencies. It is also frequently used by big corporations in the transaction of their foreign trades.

A hint? All right—there are numerous alphabets used in the solution. How?—that's up to you.

A full solution will be published the day after tomorrow. Watch tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph for additional clues to the solution.

Solution to Cipher No. 17 appears today. It was easy—if you knew how.

MOTHER, CHILD, SAVED IN FIRE

A mother and daughter were carried down a ladder to safety by a neighbor today when fire damaged their home at 1926 Kearns avenue, Westwood.

Mrs. James Gaffney, awakened by smoke, screamed from a second story window and Henry Moehring, of 1932 Kearns avenue, rushed to her aid, carrying a ladder. He carried Mary Gertrude Gaffney, 5, down the ladder and when he went back, he found Mrs. Gaffney overcome by smoke.

As he carried her out, Robert Belch, 17, assistant scoutmaster of Troop 143 and his brother, Walter, 16, also a Scout, of 1928 Kearns avenue, dashed buckets of water on the fire and checked it until firemen arrived.

The fire started in the living room grate and spread to the hall, filling it with flames and smake when Mrs. Gaffney attempted to descend. Firemen estimated the loss at $800.

New Honors Urged For Miss Anthony

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Official recognition of Susan B. Anthony as an outstanding woman in the "century of progress" by some special honor at the 1933 World Exposition in Chicago was sought today by the Susan B. Anthony Foundation.

Saying Miss Anthony secured official recognition for women at the 1893 World's Fair, Mrs. Rose Arnold Powell, author of the resolution, declared herself in favor of a similar "strong impetus to the woman movement" in 1933.

Income Tax Chief To Give Address

R. H. Maguire, chief of the income tax division of the Internal Revenue office here, will speak at a meeting of Delta Sigma Pi, University of Pittsburgh Commerce fraternity, Saturday night, at the Fort Pitt Hotel. R. H. Bishop is general chairman.

Solution to Cipher No. 17

The Cipher:

F3	K3	B3	S3	B3	O3
B5	N5	J5	P5	G5	V4
U4	H4	E4	R4	E4	J4
V7	K7	B7	X7	L7	Y7
M6	J6	C6	L6	C6	N6
V9	J9	J9	Z9	F9	E9
G8	J8	W8	P8	H8	J8

Method of Solution:

The first step is to place the symbol groups in numerical sequence. Line 3, therefore, becomes line 2, line 5 becomes line 4, etc. This need not actually be done, but can be taken care of while deciphering the message.

The number indicates which letter after the letter given in the cipher is the one used in the final message. Three means the third letter following the letter given, 4 the fourth, etc.

"F3" becomes "I" since "I" is the third letter following "F." "K3" becomes "N," etc.

The Solution:

"In every living soul a spirit cries for expression."

OWNERS FIGHT RENT DODGING

To protect owners from losses because of tenants going into bankruptcy, a method of dodging rent that is described as a "racket" in Pittsburgh and many cities, a committee of four members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and one member of the Building Owners' and Managers' Association is being formed.

This move was revealed yesterday by C. C. McKallip, downtown realtor, in a speech before the real estate board.

The local committee will cooperate with a national committee, of which McKallip is a member. The national committee has retained legal and accounting aid to determine the real condition of some of the chain organizations which have been going into bankruptcy and breaking leases on valuable business property.

McKallip urged reform of the bankruptcy laws which, he declares, favor the tenant at the expense of the owner. The naming of the local committee has not been completed, he said.

Requiem

Now, I must put my sombre cloak aside
And wear a vivid red and silver gown.
I must not weep because our love has died,
Nor let this futile grieving bow me down.

For mem'ry knows no end and has no death.
When Springtime passes I shall still have this:
A dream of you that came with lilacs' breath,
The poignant recollection of your kiss.

The little words you said, I locked away,
Because I must have known, prophetically
That I would sorely need them all, some day
To keep your image in the soul of me.

And yet, though sorrow's garb and I shall part,
There's still a mourning band around my heart!

A Form of Criticism

Frank Case, the Algonquin landlord, tells it about one of his former celebrated tenants, a famous playwright, who skipped without settling an $800 phone bill, mostly for long-distance calls. Mr. Case finally brought suit against the tenant, who scrammed to California, where he denied the debt.

Recently an Algonquinite asked Case what had become of the lawsuit.

"Oh," replied Case, "I've charged it up to profit and louse!"

And if you don't think a good wisecrack isn't a good bill-collector, when the debt-denier heard from friends that Case was saying that about him, he immediately paid the 800 smackers.

Always the Critic

One of the local critics has been chucking praises at a certain actor for the last few seasons. Because, one presumes, the critic honestly believed that the actor rated the meritorious comments.

The actor, wanting to show his appreciation, sent the reviewer a gift the other day, a bottle of hooch. The critic returned it with this note:

"Please confine your tipping to waiters, bellhops and barbers!"

Oop!

"Dear Walter," writes Russ King, "although Elinson seems to be of the opinion that Jimmy Walker travels again because he thinks he's still a Mayor, I'd rather think that it is Jimmy's gambling spirit that keeps him on the go. He's probably searching for that man who is game enough to match private lives with him!"

Snapper for Prudes

Dr. Samuel Johnson had just put out his famous dictionary. A gushing lady was trying to ingratiate herself with him. "Oh, Dr. Johnson," she cooed. "I think it's wonderful that you've left out those obscene words from your dictionary."

"Oh, madam," he squelched "so you've been looking for them?"

In Memoriam

Some of us were reminded of the time Equity barred the late Jeanne Eagels from appearing in a legit theater for a year. Miss Eagels missed a performance and the show closed. Her physician, she testified at her Equity trial, ordered her not to work, as she was ill. Her "betters," however, decided she was intoxicated and barred her, although the cast and stage hands testified she wasn't drunk, but really sick.

The irony of the verdict was that, shortly after, her name was in the lights at a Broadway movie theater—bigger than ever. And nobody ever published this fact—that when her show closed, Jeanne Eagels gave shelter and funds to many of the cast (who were broke and jobless) at her luxurious estate at Ossining, N. Y.

And so a salute to her memory.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Ina Claire, who will come to the Nixon next week as star of S. N. Berhman's new comedy, "Biography," will be making her first appearance here in a number of years. Since then she virtually wasted quite a lot of time in the movies. It was perhaps her first experience as a public entertainer in which she achieved scarcely any success—and that experience has included all types of stage work from vaudeville to straight comedy, both in America and England. In London she appeared in several musical successes. She is even an ex-star of the "Follies." Straight comedy has claimed her in "Polly With a Past" and "The Gold Diggers," for Belasco; "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," "The Awful Truth" and "Grounds For Divorce." The box-office sale of seats for "Biography," which is an American Theater Society play, opened this morning.

Hugh Banks, who is appearing in "Whispering in the Dark," being presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt this week, may be in danger of becoming spoiled. At every performance he gets a "big hand" before he starts to work. It evidently is a reward for past performances, for Hughey was long popular in the Pitt as a member of the old George Sharp Stock Company. While playing their present vehicle the company is rehearsing that of next week, "The Devil Passes," comedy success of the New York stage last season that never has been presented here. Its cast will include Hunter Gardner, who will appear as a guest artist. It is being directed by Eddie Vail, who, by the way, is playing a small part in "Whistling in the Dark."

George White's gone economical after all those years of heavy spending. His present production, "Varieties," is on a modest scale from a production angle, compared to the gorgeousness of his various editions of "Scandals," the first of which, by the way, wasn't the rich and elaborate thing the later ones came to be. "Varieties" features Harry Richman, Bert Lahr and Lili Damita, who are surrounded by singers and dancers who have done their stuff in vaudeville and musical shows.

Norma Terris Would Like 'Mysterious Stranger' As Next Operetta

By GEORGE SEIBEL

It's no wonder that Norma Terris, singing in "Show Boat" in the Nixon this week, acts Magnolia with sincerity and truth. It is almost the story of her own mother's life. The same strain of romance and misfortune, devotion and poverty, was the background of Norma Terris' young years Born in the little town of Columbus, in Kansas, as the only child of her parents, who came of two distinguished families, her real name was Allison. One of her grandfathers was Pennsylvania Dutch

Mr Seibel

That middle-western atmosphere stayed with her during the years of her education at La Grange, a college town in Missouri. There she got further preparation for the part of Magnolia, seeing life on the Mississippi River in all its phases.

From that little river town, with ducks waddling through its muddy streets, she returned to Columbus, and drifted into musical work through Mrs. Sidney Drew, her cousin, who at that time was know as Lucile McVey on the Chautauqua circuits. It was she who gave Norma the incentive and assistance required to put her on the stage.

OLD MAN RIVER'S DAUGHTER

She is a true daughter of "Old Man River." Aside from the startling parallels between "Show Boat" and her mother's life story, with the formative years spent at college, Mark Twain is her favorite writer—if she may be said to have a favorite writer.

It is out of Mark Twain that she gets more joy and satisfaction than from any other author. And she cherishes one ambition which may some day be realized. Among his works is "The Mysterious Stranger," in which she sees the germ of a fine musical satire. She hopes that some day a librettist and composer may take up this plot and give her a role in their opera.

"The Mysterious Stranger" is Satan, who comes to earth and tries to serve mankind, but they are hopeless in their witch-burning and their wars, so he turns back again after expressing his opinion of the human race as Mark Twain saw it.

Miss Terris has still another ambition—to appear in concert work of the sort Ruth Draper and Cornelia Otis Skinner are doing. She would combine a singing program with imitations—and the imitations she gives in "Show Boat," especially of Greta Garbo, justify the prediction that she could do this very well.

She gives an imitation of Ethel Barrymore, in which she does not let herself out, perhaps because Miss Barrymore is one of her many friends Among others are Katharine Cornell, Helen Menken, Judith Anderson and she has many happy memories of Grace La Rue.

STORY OF HER CAREER

Before appearing as Magnolia Miss Terris spent three years in Shubert revues. She was Nellie in George M. Cohan's "Little Nellie Kelley;" she was in "A Night in Paris" and "A Night in Spain;" she was with Jack Donahue in "Be Yourself."

Then came the royal success of "Show Boat." During the intervening years she appeared in several talking pictures—"Married in Hollywood" and "Cameo Kirby." Then she went to England to spend some years in the study of music, until she was recalled to America to resume the role of Magnolia, which will always be identified with her personality and her art.

Norma Terris is a most delightful little woman off the stage as on, with no violent notions of any sort—she admires everything that is admirable in music and literature, without prejudice to other schools. In short, she is just the wholesome, sensible and amiable sort of person that would be Cap'n Andy's daughter.

Joan Blondell is one-third of the title of "Three On a Match," photoplay in the Enright to stay through Friday.

Campus Role For Arlen

BY HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 30.—One of the few Hollywood stars who looks convincing in a football uniform, Richard Arlen, goes back to the campus in "College Humor," Paramount's new story of life in our American universities.

As hero of "Touchdown" last year and of "The All American" this fall, Dick gave two of the best performances in his long screen cereer. In this new picture, Paramount hopes to give, at last, a story of student life that will satisfy all critics.

I was watching the dancers at the La Boheme Cafe when a party made an inconspicuous entrance and took seats at a ringside table. There was only one girl. She wore a green dress and a green beret over hair of a distinctive platinum shade.

It was Jean Harlow.

So intent was the crowd on its own hilarity that few recognized her.

When I went over to her table a litle later, Jean told me a story that should make a quick bid for your sympathy.

"I've been so lonely," she said. "I get up at 7 in the morning and I play 18 holes of golf. I sit around the house. I read. At 10 o'clock I go to bed. Do this week in and week out and you're ready to cut paper dolls. So I have decided to go out a little. It keeps me from being so lonely."

Sanders Saturday Bill To Feature Singer

Helen Morgan, the piano-sitting' blues warbler, in Pittsburgh with "Showboat," has been invited to Sanders Inn at Aspinwall to hear Gladys Moore sing at Saturday night's floor show. Miss Moore is the feature of the bill. Al Carlisle's orchestra will be another attraction.

Lucrezia Bori to Sing In Costume

The program of Lucrezia Bodi, soprano of the Metropolitan Grand Opera, in Syria Mosque tomorrow night will open with the Recitative and Aria "Ne men con l'ombre" from Handal's "Xerxes." In addition to songs by Haydn, Mozart, Beach, Wolff and Browning, she will give two groups in costumes, including those of heroines she has protrayed. Among them will be Mimi, Mignon, Manon, Juliette and Violette.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Pitt defeating Stanford to wind up a season of no defeats on the gridiron is among the events pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. There are striking scenes of the crowd and of the play.

There also are the first pictures made of Leon Trotsky, former war lord of the Soviets and partner of Lenin, since his exile from Russia. The pictures were made amid the ruins of Pompeii, Trotsky having stopped over at Naples on his trip from Turkey to Denmark. The Globe Trotter describes his trip.

As Speaker of the House, John N. Garner, Vice-President-elect, through Hearst Metrotone News, demands immediate action on the modification of the Volstead act, declaring that the will of the people shown at the polls makes this imperative. He also speaks for repeal of the 18th Amendment.

The Prince of Wales is seen and heard on the occasion of his visit to Ireland, to open a new government building at Stormont.

President Hoover buys his first batch of Christmas seals from three little health crusaders. In New York, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt makes a personal appeal for aid in spreading the campaign.

At the annual Great Western Rodeo at Los Angeles, terrific falls are suffered by the cowboys.

From Salem, Mass., come pictures of 200 graceful athletic girls drilling with batons.

New York gets its first taste of Christmas spirit when the annual parade of "giant monsters" moves down Broadway.

Broadways Of the World

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

COLOMBIA HOTEL, GENOA, ITALY: Genoa is the town of bells. I've heard any number of church bells in my day, and some of them were quite beautiful. But in all my career I've never heard of a spot where they ring bells continually throughout the day and night. Take my word for it, Genoa is the place.

As soon as I finished my column yesterday, I got me an interpreter to take me around the town. There seems to be no dearth of interpreters around here. The moment I asked for one at the desk, 50 of them sprang out of the ground. I finally picked out a bird named Ernest, a portly gentleman with a sad expression.

Ernest tells me he has a sick wife who has been ailing for some time. He hasn't told me once; he's told me 10 times. And as the time grows nearer for me to tip him, his poor wife seems to get sicker and sicker. I'm very much afraid that if my tip does not come up to his expectations, the dear lady will die by telepathy.

Except for the hotel clerks, there are but few people around here who speak English. So I left everything to Ernest. It was he who ordered the car that was to take me around Genoa until I left the city. The machine was a huge Fiat, and the driver was a thin, little man named Angelo.

Off he went, at Ernest's suggestion, to visit the house in which Christopher Columbus was born. That's probably the starting point for every tourist who ever arrived here. But, as Jimmy Durante says, I was in no mood to dicker. So thither we drove.

I regret to report that the house in which Chris first cried for his bottle did not interest me at all. It was exactly the same as any other house in the neighborhood, and they refuse to give you a glimpse of the interior. The guide could have told me that Winchell was born there, and I wouldn't have known the difference.

A block or so away, however, I found myself in a highly interesting section of the town. Ernest tagged along. And after urging me to beware of pickpockets—he didn't know I had covered Broadway for years—he informed me that I was in the poorest part of Genoa. It might have been all of that, but it was doggone interesting.

The varieties of odors would have fascinated a connoisseur of stockyards. Every foot or so somebody was selling something. Here an old lady with a box of grapes. There an old man with some sickly bananas. Hardly room to move, and everybody talking away at a prolific rate.

Poor people, all of them. Their clothes are far from the best, and they have no knowledge of the meaning of luxury. They live in crowded quarters, and actual comfort, such as we enjoy, must be unknown to them. Yet the expressions on their faces amazed me. They all seemed extremely happy. I haven't seen an American bank president in years who looked half as joyous as the poorest Genoese.

Compared to ours, the cost of living here sounds almost absurd. In the better sections of the city an attractive house can be rented for $140 a year—and that's a high price. What the Ghetto folks pay for quarters—even my guide could not tell me. I'll hazard a guess, though, that the average man pays his rent and raises his family on less than a dollar a day. And when they raise families here, brother, they raise families!

Bit by bit, Mussolini is wiping out these Ghetto sections in different towns and rebuilding them in modern fashion. What this great figure is doing for Italy at the moment is almost beyond belief. I've been here but a short time, but even his enemies seem to admit that.

I'll say no more about Mussolini at the moment, however. I'll save all that until I'm out of Italy. You think I'm crazy?

Back we went to the car. Angelo was waiting patiently. I turned to my interpreter.

"Tell him," I said, indicating the chauffeur, "that I want to drive up some of those steep hills over there. You get a good view of Genoa from there, don't you?"

Ernest wagged his dome.

"Splendid," he replied. "You will be surprised at the height we will attain. It is one of the finest views in Italy."

"Good," I asserted. "That's what I want. Tell him to go ahead. And let him step on it."

The guide spoke to the chauffeur in Italian. Angelo nodded—and away we went. And thus began one of the craziest rides and one of the strangest experiences I have ever encountered.

Angelo drove—and how he drove! In far less time than it takes me to tell you about it, the man was at the foot of a mountain road. He missed bicycles by inches and pedestrians by the half-inch. My heart was in my throat.

"Tell him," I cried, "to take it easy. I want to go around this world; not under it."

Ernest was totally unmoved.

"Do not worry," he replied calmly. "We have good drivers here. They permit no accidents."

I sank back in the car and tried to close my eyes. No use. The machine was climbing the mountain at a terrific pace. The road was fairly good, but it was extremely narrow and there was no protection of any kind. The turns were so sharp that the car never made them on four wheels.

There was no end to this thing. I'll swear I would have felt far safer in a falling parachute. Up and up and up we went. Finally, after one particularly bad turn, I could stand it no longer. I was so nervous that I forgot myself and spoke in English to the chauffeur.

"For heaven's sake," I yelled, "why don't you slow down? I'm telling you to cut this out!"

Angelo decreased his speed a trifle. He turned half-way around. There was a disgusted look upon his face.

"Why don't you stop worrying, buddy?" he cried. "You've got nothing to be nervous about. I used to drive a cab in Brooklyn!" . . .

That ended my sightseeing for the day. I slipped Angelo a few vivid pointers in our own language and ordered him to drive me back to this hotel. I had my dinner and then tried to get a decent sleep for myself.

No use. The moment I would doze off, bells would ring. There was positively no end to them. Loud ones. Soft ones. Bells from the distance. Bells that seemed to come from my very room. Bells. Bells. Bells.

I finally gave it up as a bad job and turned to a magazine I had found in my room. It was a Saturday Evening Post from last April.

It's morning now, and Ernest just entered my room. He is going to remain as my interpreter and guide until I catch my train to Rome this afternoon. I told him I couldn't sleep because of the bells. Why did they ring them so often?

"Oh," he replied easily, "there was a big celebration last night. An important man just died!" . . .

JOEL McCREA SEES NEW DODGE SIX IN PRE-VIEW

Hollywood, Cal.-Joel McCrea, youthful talking picture star, whose performance in Radio Picture's feature, "Bird of Paradise," was a nationwide sensation, attended an advance showing here today of the new Dodge Six car.

"Since this great car hasn't yet made its public appearance," said the popular young actor, "I suppose I can say I was among those present when the new Dodge Six was born.

"Let me say that it's a pretty husky baby. It's about the prettiest one you've ever seen. This big new Dodge Six is a new kind of car, with a new kind of smart, sporty good looks.

"It has a personality all its own. In beauty, in comfort, in performance, in luxury, and in features, it will blaze a new trail so dazzling that others will have a hard time following."

No official details concerning the new Dodge Six car have as yet been made by the Dodge organization. It is evident, however, that the new Dodge marks revolutionary progress in the automobile world, at a low price level which will establish it as the great value for 1933.

MACFARLANE ACTS TO CURB ELECTION FRAUD LENIENCY

JUDGE UPHOLDS COUNTY'S CARE OF CHILDREN

Soffel Answers Charge Of Auditor, Cites Many Handicaps

Answering the report of the auditor for the county on the system of "farming out" wards of the Juvenile Court, Judge Sara M. Soffel, presiding in Juvenile Court, declared her court was struggling along with an inadequate staff, in overcrowded quarters and with tools that are antiquated.

She agreed in several instances with the report of C. M. Conick—who made the county audit—made several recommendations herself and then pictured an ideal Juvenile Court: a separate court with a permanent judge, housed in a building of its own, with a staff adequate to do the work and selected solely on a basis of merit.

Judge Soffel says she is convinced that the majority of caretakers are good foster-parents.

WORK CLASSIFICATION

The Judge advocates that a proper classification be made at once and each employe of the Juvenile Court be listed according to the work he performs. This is in answer to Conick's report, which stated that certain individuals are carried on the Juvenile Court staff as probation officers while they were engaged solely in office duty.

Judge Soffel recommended that in reclassifying and providing additional help the following standards be followed:

No person shall be employed (except an office boy) who has not had a high school education.

All persons employed as probation officers or as visitors in the home-finding department shall have social service training.

All persons employed as stenographers and in any other position in the court shall be persons of experience and definite ability in their particular field of work.

Answering the auditor's report, which stated that the collection division of her court consisted of only two persons and that the amount collected last year was the smallest percentage of amount assessed to be collected in a four-year period, Judge Soffel said:

"During 1931-32 the great majority of parents whose children are being cared for by the county were unable to pay the orders that had been assessed against them. The majority of parents are out of work and are being cared for by social agencies.

Judge Soffel declared a sufficient field staff should be maintained in the collection division, but pointed out that collections are properly not a function of the County Court.

In the auditor's report it was pointed out that there has been a steady and marked increase in the number of foster homes having more than four children in recent years. Judge Soffel answers this as follows:

"The increase in number of homes caring for more than four children in the year 1932 is in part the result of the unusual number of dependent children who were brought into court due to the depression and the policy of keeping families together. There are only four homes which house seven children and special conditions justify this action."

"I am convinced the majority of the caretakers are good foster-parents. This statement is based upon the court's actual observation of many of them. withstanding."

Judge Soffel denied that at the present time there were 14 per cent of the foster homes located outside the county. She said there are only 17 homes, out of the entire 632, located outside the limits of the county.

In closing her statement, Judge Soffel stressed the importance of caring for the under-privileged child.

No Successor Named For Henry J. Davis

No successor has been named for Henry J. Davis, who resigned yesterday as general superintendent of the Carnegie Steel Company's plant at Clairton, company officials said today. Davis, who is 67 and has been at Clairton since 1905, leaves the company's employ January 1. He has served the Carnegie Steel Company 43 years.

Father and Son Burned In Garage Explosion

A Munhall man and his 3-year-old son were in the Homestead Hospital today, suffering from burns received in an explosion in a garage at Grant street and Bush alley, Munhall, that knocked them to the ground and ignited their clothing, late yesterday.

They are John Lebbeda, 29, of 917 Market street, and his son, John, Jr., both burned about the face, hands and body.

Lebbeda went to the garage to work on his automobile. When he lighted a match an explosion followed, which blew off the garage doors, injured him and his son and set the garage afire.

Lebbda picked up his son and rushed to the emergency office of the Homestead Steel Company, nearby, where Dr. E. B. McCormick treated both. Two fire companies extinguished the blaze. Automobiles belonging to Andrew Milchalk and Lebbeda wered amaged.

Firemen estimated damages at $300.

37 Great Vats, Carefully Tended All These Years, Ready for 1933's U. S. Beer?

BREWMASTER WILLIAM M. STAPF . . . FOR YEARS HAS CARED FOR THESE 37 EMPTY VATS

BREWER JOSEPH HERGENREDER POURING HOPS INTO 'NEAR BEER' . . . BETTER BEER SOON?

Vats 'Nursed' Here For Return of Beer

Brewery Which Had Force of 1,100 Now Employs 65

Brewmaster William J. Stapf is carefully nursing 37 big vats in the Pittsburgh Brewing Company's plant in Liberty avenue against the day when the law will allow "real" beer to flow into them.

Part of the plant now is devoted to the manufacture of near beer, but for many years those big vats, holding 300 barrels each, have been empty. Emptiness, however, has not brought deterioration. You would think they were installed but yesterday, so carefully have they been attended.

The brewing industry has hope that the costly upkeep of its plants and equipment will not be in vain, and companies here are prepared to turn out the "real stuff" as soon as 2.75 or 4 per cent beer, as the case may be is legalized.

ONCE EMPLOYED 1,100

Once the Pittsburgh Brewing Company employed 1,100 men, operated its plants night and day, and the plants hummed with activity. Now there are about 65 persons working three or four days a week making near beer. The huge establishment in Liberty avenue seems almost deserted—a handful of men in the brewhouse, a few in the bottling plant, and in some departments none at all.

But the big copper brewing kettles and the brass work here and there shine none the less brightly, as the brewing industry bides its time until "real" beer is legalized. As to what constitutes "real" beer, Brewmaster Stapf says:

SAYS 2.75 OKAY

"A percentage of 2.75 is good beer."

Stapf has been around the plant for many years. He heads a staff of expert brewers, now engaged in making beer that must contain less than ½ of 1 per cent of alcohol. The change necessary to make beer of higher alcoholic content is negligible, and company officials say they have supplies necessary to operate at capacity when demand increases.

Brewing companies here have placed larger orders for supplies for the coming year than in any year since prohibition went into effect.

England Waves Distress Flag and Brass Knuckles

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

About the only difference between England and America is a good engine and a sandwich.

The folks over there are also bothered by their statesmen and their politicians. The only difference is that an English statesman and politician is one man. Over here, we have to pay two salaries to get the same results.

London has its financiers who take advantage of national distress while waving a flag in one hand and brass knucks in the other.

The English pound is bouncing around like a grasshopper on a bass drum. It has sluffed two dollars and is hardly worth borrowing. But the bankers are doing all right. They're howling at the edge of the woods.

We thought the financiers were the same in all languges until Ivan Krueger got 'em in Swedish.

Ivan caught 'em asleep. The best we can do over here is to catch 'em nodding. But never in the affirmative.

$1,750 HOLDUP PAIR SOUGHT

Two bandits who obtained $1,750 in the holdup last night of the Abbott Sales and Service at 1323 Pennsylvania avenue, were being sought by police today.

M. F. Abbott, the proprietor, was forced to open a safe. While one bandit "covered" Abbott, his accomplice ordered George Leiterman, 1226 Juniata street, night attendant, into a hallway.

The two holdup men walked into the garage immediately after Abbott had driven in. Suspecting a holdup, Abbott removed a $500 diamond ring from his finger and threw it to the floor of his automobile, police said he told them.

When Abbott stepped out of his car, he and Leiterman were ordered to throw up their hands and were marched into the office.

Four months ago Abbott was robbed of a diamond ring valued at $1,000 by two bandits who held him up in his garage.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 1.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

They got a "gag" in these colleges now. They slip up behind an old boy or girl and say, "What are you going to major in?".

"Oh, professor, I am not going in the army. I ain't going to do any majoring."

"I mean what is to be your life's work? Hurry up now. Let me know before noon."

Now there is nothing they can do, yet they are told to make up their minds what it is! Suppose professors and teachers were told they couldn't teach any more, but to make up their minds what they were going to "major" in?

If somebody took my little jokes and good looks away from me, I know it would take me a right smart spell before I could make up my mind what to "major" in. Especially if this Eighteenth Amendment is voted out.

Yours, WILL.

The Missing Persons Bureau has been asked to aid the search for Mrs. Mary M. Miller, 65, a widow, formerly of 1322 Gibbon street, who disappeared October 29 from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Florence Doyle, Butler, Pa. Mrs. Doyle and her husband had come to Pittsburgh for a football game when the aged woman wandered away.

WELFARE DRIVE EXTENDED

Welfare Fund campaigners today started the second extended week of campaigning since the first-set end of their drive for $2,500,000 for 1933 expenses, November 23.

They will drive for reports from 200 large business establishments in Pittsburgh who have as yet failed to record their pledges. They will seek contributions from tens of thousands of small subscribers of last year.

As the week opened, with the campaigners still $345,000 short of their goal, the Allegheny County Emergency Association waited for word from Harrisburg on their application for $900,000-odd state and federal aid for December.

Results of a meeting of the Pennsylvania Emergency Relief Boad in Harrisburg yesterday were to tell the tale, today. Without that aid, the county will have no December relief and the city will be sorely cramped, S. E. Claney, the association's director, said.

Library Books Leading 'Tough Life' During Slump

823,000 Volumes In City Used Constantly

MISS MARGARET M'GLADIGEN . . . ONE OF 16 CONSTANTLY REPAIRING LIBRARY'S BOOKS

It's a strenuous life these days for a book at Carnegie Library.

Besides passing through hundreds of pairs of hands, it must submit to one rebinding before it is finally discarded. In all it has a much shorter life than in pre-depression days. Ralph Munn, director of the library, said today:

"Our bindery is busier than ever before. There has been a 49 per cent increase in books lent for home reading, while our fund for buying new books has been reduced 26 per cent."

The increased wear and tear on the books tells the story of people turning to books in idle hours. The 823,000 volumes in the library are being used as never before.

In the bindery six girls and 10 men are kept busy mending and rebinding the books used in the 14 branches and the central library. To reduce costs a new method of binding magazines has been introduced and book covers have been standardized to red and green. During the past year over 175,000 books have passed through the binding department.

Munn explained that even the economic, history, fine art and technical books are leading a tough life today. He said:

"College students not able to go back to school are attempting to make up what they are missing and many people are reading technical subjects to prepare for a job."

JUSTICE AGENTS SENT HERE TO CHECK VOTE

Return Board Finds Tampering in Scott Twp.

As evidence of fraud in the recent election continued to be revealed in the recount board, and with United States Attorney Louis E. Graham announcing that Department of Justice agents had been assigned to investigate charges of cheating, President Judge James R. Macfarlane today had on record a new court rule aimed to reveal why election violations were to be quashed.

Returning Board Judges James H. McNaugher and John P. Egan today certified the election board figures from the First District, Scott Township to the returning board, when the recount board had revealed changed figures. At the same time the County Commissioners' investigation of fraud charges was being pushed by Leo A. Riordan, of the Bureau of Invstigation.

MACFARLANE'S RULE

Judge Macfarlane's rule reads:

"All motions made by the district attorney for nolle pros of indictments for election violations and felony shall be made in writing stating the reasons therefor."

In the Scott Township district, where the election board reported 203 straight Democratic votes, 51 straight Republican, and 87 split tickets, the Democratic candidates for the Twelfth Legislative District had majorities of approximately 100 when the board completed its count, it was testified. Today the ballots, when the box was opened by the recount board, showed Republican candidates had been placed in the lead by more than 100 votes.

United States Attorney Graham, commenting on the petition of Democratic Chairman David Lawrence concerning the Thirtieth Congressional contest, said:

"This office is prepared to cooperate within the limits placed by acts of Congress to prevent violation of the election laws where the federal law is concerned. A representative of the Department of Justice has been assigned to investigate the matter."

PARK EXPLAINS

District Attorney Andrew T. Park, commenting on Judge Macfarlane's ruling, said he could not understand the reason for it at this time, as his office had prosecuted all election cases and obtained many convictions. Later, he said, the office ran into a list of cases which really should have been quashed because of insufficient evidence, but they went to trial and the costs were placed on the prosecutor, Leo Riordan, the county investigator.

At the Commissioners' meeting Commissioner C. C. McGovern said:

"It is the place of the Commissioners and not the newspapers to make known the result of the election through unofficial returns. Some of the districts do not report until two days after election. If a couple of husky policemen invaded this place and saw to it the board made prompt returns or spent the night in the 'hoosegow' it would soon break up this practice. We need some good men to hound these thieves to death. Lots of men would be glad to have the job for little money."

CONFER WITH JUDGES

After the hearing the Commissioners conferred with Return

Washington Boy Being Sought Here

The Bureau of Missing Persons today was asked to keep a lookout for 15-year-old William Boyd Garner, whose disappearance from his home in Washington has caused his mother's illness. He is a son of Norval Garner, an attache of the Pan-American Union. The boy has a scar on his right ear.

Long Says 'Alky' Plant Paid $1,200 Weekly

Cross-examination of Rocco DiPippa, alias Roxie Long, the government's principal witness in the liquor conspiracy trial before Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, was resumed this morning. DiPippa, a defendant in the case who has pleaded guilty, has been on the witness stand since the opening of the trial Monday, and under cross-examination since Tuesday afternoon.

At yesterday's session, DiPippa was cross-examined on testimony he gave under direct examination, in which he told of ramifications in operation of the alleged liquor ring. He was quizzed by Defense Attorneys John D. Meyer, J. A. Richardson, Jacob Shulgold and W. H. Coleman. Many times during the day the attorneys complained DiPippa was evasive in answers. DiPippa's memory appeared faulty as to specific dates relative to alleged moonshine still operations, and he would answer, "I don't remember."

In his cross-examination, DiPippa told of an alleged cutting plant in Calvert street, Baldwin Township, which he said he owned with Mike Damus, a defendant, which brought them a weekly profit of between $1,200 and $1,400. The sessions were enlivened somewhat by several mild clashes between Assistant United States Attorney Raymond D. Evans and members of defense counsel.

Of the 45 defendants named in the indictment, 19 have entered pleas of guilty, 23 are standing trial, one is a fugitive and the case against two others has been continued because of illness. The last to sign a plea of guilty was Phillip Emille, just released from the Ohio State Penitentiary.

EXPECT CREDIT FROM NEW U. S. BANK

The United States has never had half enough low priced homes to make it possible for the average income family to own its dwelling, Ward B. Whitlock, of Springfield, Ill., declared at the ninth annual banquet of the Allegheny County League of Building and Loan Associations last night in William Penn Hotel.

The president of the United States Building and Loan League indorsed the Federal Home Loan Bank, declaring:

"More homes will be built through building and loan financing. Using the facilities of the Federal Home Loan banks, the associations will be able to meet the needs. The truth is that we may have too many expensive homes, but we are far from adequately supplied with homes for the family which lives on less than $3,500 a year.

"The theory about overbuilding of homes is based on something like this: A man goes driving around the country and sees a few $30,000 homes for sale and concludes that there are too many houses. He also sees tumble-down shacks that nobody should be expected to live in, and yet draws conclusions from them that we are overbuilt. Or somebody else tries to sell his $7,500 house and nobody can buy it because the financing isn't available. I don't call that a surplus of homes. I call it a pretty badly handled mortgage credit situation. And the Home Loan banks are going to untangle that tight credit maze.

"I believe that the Home Loan Bank as it exists today is deserving of a good, practical test. We in the building and loan business believe that the law now on the statute books is drawn up on the soundest principles. The burden of proving that we are right lies with the executives of building and loan associations who must decide to buy stock in the regional bank."

Among other speakers were William E. Best, Pittsburgh attorney, and a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board; Ernest T. Trigg, chairman of the Home Loan Bank of Pittsburgh, and Robert T. Houlden, past president of the Allegheny County League, who acted as toastmaster. Best defended the Home Loan Bank from critics who charged it with lagging in advancing loans. Best said it was operating 11 months after organization while the Federal Land Bank required two years to start.

SANTA PARADES IN EAST END

Santa Claus and his reindeer were swamped by admiring throngs of children in East Liberty as he was escorted through the business district in a parade yesterday afternoon.

The parade was made up of four bands, clowns, two calliopes and mummers. It was sponsored by the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce.

"Santa" brought five reindeer for the parade. There had been nine in the entourage, but four, unaccustomed to anything but Alaska's cold, died before the party reached the city.

After the parade, Santa Claus took one of his reindeer to the Industrial Home for Crippled Children, Denniston avenue, and greeted each of the 80 children.

The committee in charge of the parade was headed by Howard Newberry, assisted by Henry Bluestone, F. A. Hurdulis and Herbert Sanders. John "Pop" Golden was in charge of music. Herbert Mansmann led the business men's

The Commissioners authorized the return board $2,500, making a total of $7,500 to date.

Lawrence consider the results of the Sharpsburg recount so vital he requested United States District Attorney Louis E. Graham to investigate charges of fraud.

In addition, Lawrence has personally offered a $1,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of "the person or persons who attempted to steal the election from Twing Brooks in Sharpsburg."

SMITH OFFERS NEW CITY PLAN

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith today presented to the Hofstadter legislative committee a detailed plan for complete reorganization of the city government, under which the Mayor would be the supreme executive officer with a Legislature of two houses, a City Senate and a City Assembly, under him.

Smith, who was reared on the lower East Side, served in the Assembly and was four times elected Governor of New York, told the committee that the borough system, adopted 35 years ago, had become antiquated and that it was time to decide whether there are to be five cities or one city.

He said the present time offered the first opportunity that has arisen during his quarter-century in public life to obtain a thorough-going reorganization to bring the city government up to date.

BLAST INJURES WOMAN, CHILD

Climaxing a series of attempts to force him out of business, police say, a bomb early today wrecked the shoe repair shop and home of Cyrill Smelik at 1513 Brinton avenue, North Bradodck, causing injury to two.

Anna Jane, 7-year-old daughter of Smelik, was cut on the hand by glass which showered over the bed in which she was sleeping, and Mrs. Mary Wittress, 53, of 1505 Brinton avenue, also cut on the hands by flying glass.

Smelik moved into the neighborhood last February. A few days later a brick was hurled through a plate glass window, North Braddock police said, adding that a second attempt was made to frighten him away, during the summer.

The bomb, evidently placed near the front door, split a heavy stone step and shattered the front of the building. Windows in houses within a radius of a block were broken, while the blast was heard throughout Turtle Creek Valley.

Smelik and his wife, Sophia, sleeping in the room occupied by their daughter, escaped injury.

Wife Charges Mate Vanished With Son

Mrs. Mildred Kelleher, 30, of 68 South Twelfth street, today asked the Missing Persons Bureau to apprehend her husband, William M. Kelleher, Sr., who she said, had left home last May 12, taking their 5-year-old son, William, Jr.

She wants the boy back, she told police.

MOTHER RUNS OVER CHILD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Run over by an automobile driven by her mother, 9-year-old Louise Brown was in a serious condition today, although able to smile and say:

"It wasn't your fault, mamma."

Mrs. Nell Brown took her daughter shopping with her shortly before dark last night. As they started back home, the child toppled from the seat beside her and one of the front wheels passed over her as the car was backed up.

The mother did not notice the child fall out and the first she knew what had happened was when she felt the wheel roll over an object "like a big stone," she said.

ACCUSED MAN TAKES POISON

Today secret service agents reported Lavin is in Mercy Hospital suffering from a poison draught swallowed yesterday, it appeared, at about the time his case was called for trial. Attendants said he would recover.

AUTO LICENSE APPEAL HEARD

His automobile drivers' license revoked by the State Highway Department for passing an automobile on a mountain grade near Uniontown, Attorney William D. Grimes, in an appeal before Judge James H. Gray in Common Pleas Court, yesterday, said he had passed the truck on the inside of a curve and that he could see 400 feet ahead.

Decision on restoration of his license will be made later.

Department representatives said Grimes could obtain his license by apologizing for his failure to attend a rehearing which had been set after his appeal from a $10 judgment.

WILL IGNORES BEAUTY'S SONS

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Two small children of the late Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger and his third wife, the former Miss Charlotte Nash, of St. Louis, do not share directly in the several million dollar estate of their grandfather, Samuel F. Nirdlinger, theatrical magnate, as reported for audit in the Orphans Court.

The children are Frederick G and Charlotte Loue Nixon-Nirdlinger. They are provided for in the will of their father, who was shot and killed by Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger in Nice, France, March 11, 1931.

Phillip Sterling, appointed by the court to audit the second accounting by the trustees of the estate, reported late yesterday the balance of principal to be $2,802,533 and income of $801,639 since 1926.

The elder Nirdlinger died in 1918. Most of the income from the trust fund was distributed to his son, the latter's divorced wife, Theresa Burke Nirdlinger, adopted daughter of the testator, and to her two sons, Samuel F. C. and John F. Z. Nirdlinger.

The children of Nixon-Nirdlinger by his last marriage will not participate in their grandfather's estate unless their two half-brothers die without issue.

HARRIS TO SEEK STATE FINANCE SURVEY

A bill to establish an agency responsible for a yearly statement of the state's finances, to avoid conflicting financial reports and figures, will be presented to Legislature by State Senator Frank J. Harris, he announced last night before the Allied Boards of Trade.

Senator Harris said:

"During the last session an occasion arose which required that the Legislature be furnished with the costs and expected revenues of a certain department in order to vote intelligently on a bill before the members.

"There ensued a confusion which was almost unbelievable. The legislators had various sets of figures between which there was wide discrepancies. The department in question submitted one set declaring it correct. The State Treasurer disagreed and submitted quite a different set.

"There should be established some co-relating agency responsible for a yearly statement to be accepted as the official statement of the state's finances. It might be termed a financial review board and consist of the Auditor General, the State Treasurer, the Secretary and the Department of Revenue, the budget officer and the Attorney General. It should be the duty of this board to meet a month before the convening of the Legislature to draft such a statement, which would be official. In disagreements the majority should rule.

"Upon the convening of the Legislature, a copy of the official statement should be given to each member, also to the Governor, heads of departments and others entitled to such a statement. Copies should be made available to the general public. It is upon these figures that all bills would then be predicated.

"The board I propose, while it would have the power to establish the official yearly financial statement, would in no way restrict the present rights of any taxpayer to inspect the books of the state. Its power would be limited to co-relating figures of departments and assembling them into an intelligent whole."

The board last night approved resolutions urging municipal purchase and operation of the South Pittsburgh Water Company, the Pennsylvania Water Company and other companies supplying water at rates higher than those in the city's water department.

Alderman George H. Young, of the Twenty-seventh Ward, sponsor of the resolution, suggested that the city acquire the companies through a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

G. O. P. WOMEN URGE ECONOMY

HARRISBURG, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Governmental economy dominated to the last the tenth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women, which closed last night.

When the final address of the long series devoted to lower state and local costs had been heard, the council followed words with action by indorsing President Hoover's national budget slash and urging the 1933 Legislature to cut state expenses. The delegates pledged themselves also to scrutinize closely the budgets of their local municipalities.

The council opposed reductions of the state educational budget, except for non-instructional items of school expenditure and urged retention of the mimimum teachers' salaries provisions with amendments to permit temporary cuts during the next biennium.

The complete slate of officers and directors presented by the nominating committee was elected, Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, Wilkes-Barre, being re-elected for a third term as president.

The girls disappeared after a motor trip with Ross and their bodies were found on the advice of a native witch doctor. The defense had based its hope on a plea of insanity.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

INJURED HOME INTRUDER HELD

A Negro who leaped through a second floor window of the home of Louis Leshney, at 2516 Center avenue, last night when Leshney and his wife surprised him looting the place, was in Mercy Hospital today with a probable skull fracture, according to police.

When Leshney and his wife returned they found the entire house ransacked. Leshney stepped into a bedroom and saw a Negro dive head-first through the window onto the concrete driveway alongside the house.

Picked up by police and taken to the hospital, he gave his name as William Lawson, 28, of 638 Hollace street.

Clothing valued at several hundred dollars had been piled up by the Negro near the window, police said.

CHEVROLET MEN SEE NEW CAR

One hundred and forty Pennsylvania and Maryland Chevrolet automobile dealers left Pittsburgh last night for the Chevrolet proving grounds at Milford, Mich., to view the new Chevrolet which will be shown this month.

The dealers will attend a special sales meeting today at which H. J. Klingler will speak. They will become acquainted with the facts and specifications of the new car, which is described as a new departure in the low priced field.

The dealers will return here Friday.

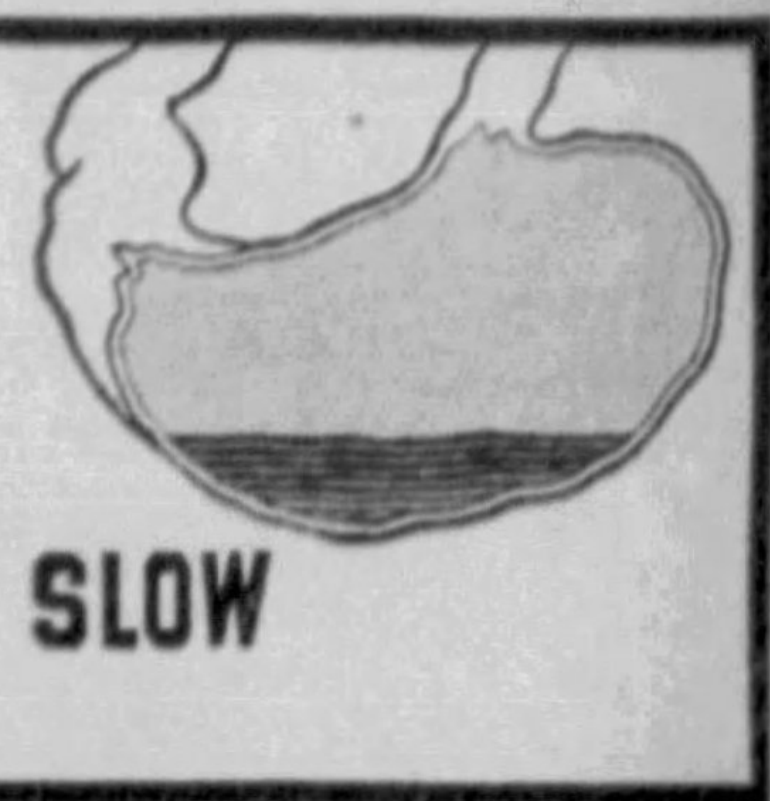
WHEN YOUR STOMACH RUNS AN HOUR SLOW



Most "indigestion" has been found imaginary! The pains and gas and all that misery are real, of course. But nine times in ten they are symptoms only of slow stomach.

Did you know you can regulate your stomach to empty in six hours, as it should? That this is as easy as moving the bowels?

One box of Pape's Diapepsin will test your stomach and correct your digestion time in a couple of days—at a cost of twenty-five cents!

Each tablet of diapepsin saves the stomach half an hour's labor.

If your stomach is an hour slow, two tablets will remedy the trouble. Then eat anything. Baked beans every noon if you like them, and lobster at midnight suppers. They will digest like crackers and milk in a six-hour stomach!

Pape's Diapepsin is good for you, because it stimulates the gastric flow. Use it freely until the stomach is working right without any help. When it slows down, take diapepsin again for a day or two. This helps coffee drinkers and hard smokers, too.

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

After the spurt of deb entertainments early this month and with the Cinderella ball over, things have been a bit dull for the merry group of 1932 buds as far as formal parties go.

But they are a fun-loving, unspoiled lot of girls, resourceful enough to entertain themselves with all sorts of informal affairs from dancing to the radio at impromptu gatherings to tripping off to the movies.

With the arrival of the holiday season they are going to have a taste of the before-the-depression debutante whirl. All the men who've been rushing our debs at the eastern football games and proms will be home, there'll be dances and teas, and everything will be ever so gay.

Debut Date Set

Among the first of the holiday affairs will be pretty Mary Lee Rusts' debut party. Her parents, the Stirling Murray Rusts, will give a luncheon in their home December 19.

The guests will be limited to the debs of this year and the past season. This custom of including the debs of the former year has become ever so popular. And it gives a girl an extra year of debbing really.

* * *

That attractive youthful matron, Mrs. William Larimer Jones, Jr., is in New York for a few days, and is stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria.

* * *

Benefit Aides

Debs are always in demand at benefits, and attractive workers they make. At the Shady Side-Vang polo game at the Armory, December 10, for the benefit of the Mt. Vernon Alumnae Association's soup kitchen at the Knox School, South Side, a group of buds will sell candy.

They are Margaret Meanor, blonde Mary Colwell Jennings, Mary Rust, Betty Shaw, Dorothy Blaxter and Elizabeth Craig.

All this news I gleaned at the meeting of the association yesterday in the home of the newlywed Mrs. George Dickson, Shady avenue.

Anne Wehr is going to sell tickets, aided by Margaret Meanor and Bertha Dunbar.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

Usually debs are so busy debbing that their career in philanthropic work is postponed until they are out a season.

But this year, when entertainments are fewer, several of the girls are getting an early start in the work of a society woman.

Attractive Mary Rust, who'll bow in December, finds time to roll bandages for the West Penn Hospital. A group of girls meets in her home one afternoon a week.

And Althea Robinson, the W. C. Robinsons' merry young daughter, who won't come out formally until spring, has been saleslady at several Woman's Exchange special sales.

* * *

A young bride, who'll return this week-end with her bridegroom from their Nassau honeymoon, has an unusual hobby.

She's Mrs. Porter Sawyer Kier, Jr., of Darlington road, now, the former Katherine Elizabeth Stewart, of Butler.

Her hobby—landscape gardening. And she's no amateur. She studied it while at Vassar. And was a leader in the Butler Garden Club.

* * *

One of my sleuths insists that when Geraldine Farrar was here a year ago she wore exactly the same style gown as Lotte Lehmann appeared in during her recent concert here.

* * *

And I hear that music will not be the only appeal in Lucrezia Bori's concert tomorrow night in Syria Mosque. She's planning to wear bewitching French gowns.

Double Wedding Tonight To Be Elaborate Event

The most unusual event, perhaps, of today is a double wedding at 6:30 o'clock this evening in the Third Presbyterian Church, when Miss Bertha Jane Phillips is to become the bride of L. Hamilton Phillips, of Forbes street, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Irwin Phillips, of Cleveland, and her sister, Miss Martha Estelle Phillips, is to become the bride of Charles Remington Ellicott, Jr., of Glen Ridge, N. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Ellicott, of Glen Ridge.

The brides are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reith Phillips, of Orchard drive, Mt. Lebanon. Officiating is to be the Rev. Dr. William L. McEwan.

The church is to be elaborately decorated with tall girondoles, each holding five yellow tapers and entwined with smilax placed alternately along the aisles. Before a background of cibotium ferns and variegated foliage, interspersed with seven-candle candelabra, are placed two prie dieux covered with gold satin and gold lace, on either side of which are 13 branch Italian wrought iron candelabra.

Brides' Gowns

The brides are to wear gowns of white velvet, having high necklines, long trains, draped from the waistline, and Spanish Conquistador sleeves. Their veils of tulle are to be finished with caps of tulle banded with seed pearls, and they are to have face veils of the tulle. Their flowers will be gardenias and lilies of the valley made into colonial bouquets.

Mrs. James Burnett, of Dayton, O., and Mrs. Zimmerman, of Houston, Tex., sister of the brides, as matrons of honor, are to wear copper-rose crepe having deep capes trimmed in wine velvet with matching turbans and veils, and are to carry deep bronze chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids all will wear turquoise blue crepe trimmed in wine velvet with matching hats and carry gold chrysanthemums. Miss Martha Phillips' bridesmaids are to be Mrs. Henry Clay Givan, Jr., Miss Helen Cole, and Miss Elizabeth Ellicott, sister of the bridegroom, and her sister's, Miss Rebecca Elizabeth Duncan, of Dayton, O.; Miss Dorothy McNair and Miss Cora May Ingham.

The flower girls, Gwendolyn Rinehart and Virginia Phillips Zimmerman, are to wear yellow accordian pleated chiffon frocks and carry Colonial bouquets.

Mrs. Phillips, mother of the bride, is to wear beige velvet lace and Kolinsky and orchids.

Dinner, Reception

The dinner and reception will be held in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. The brides' long oval table will be covered with a cloth of gold satin having a center panel of coral satin, with gold lace over all, centered with fall flowers lighted by yellow tapers in canary colored glass holders, interspersed with clusters of hothouse grapes tied with bows of cerise satin and lace.

Smaller tables in the ballroom for the guests were to be decorated with fall flowers and yellow tapers in white holders.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Ellicott will leave for a honeymoon in Bermuda. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will be at home in Mt. Lebanon, and Mr. and Mrs. Ellicott in Brooklyn, N. Y.

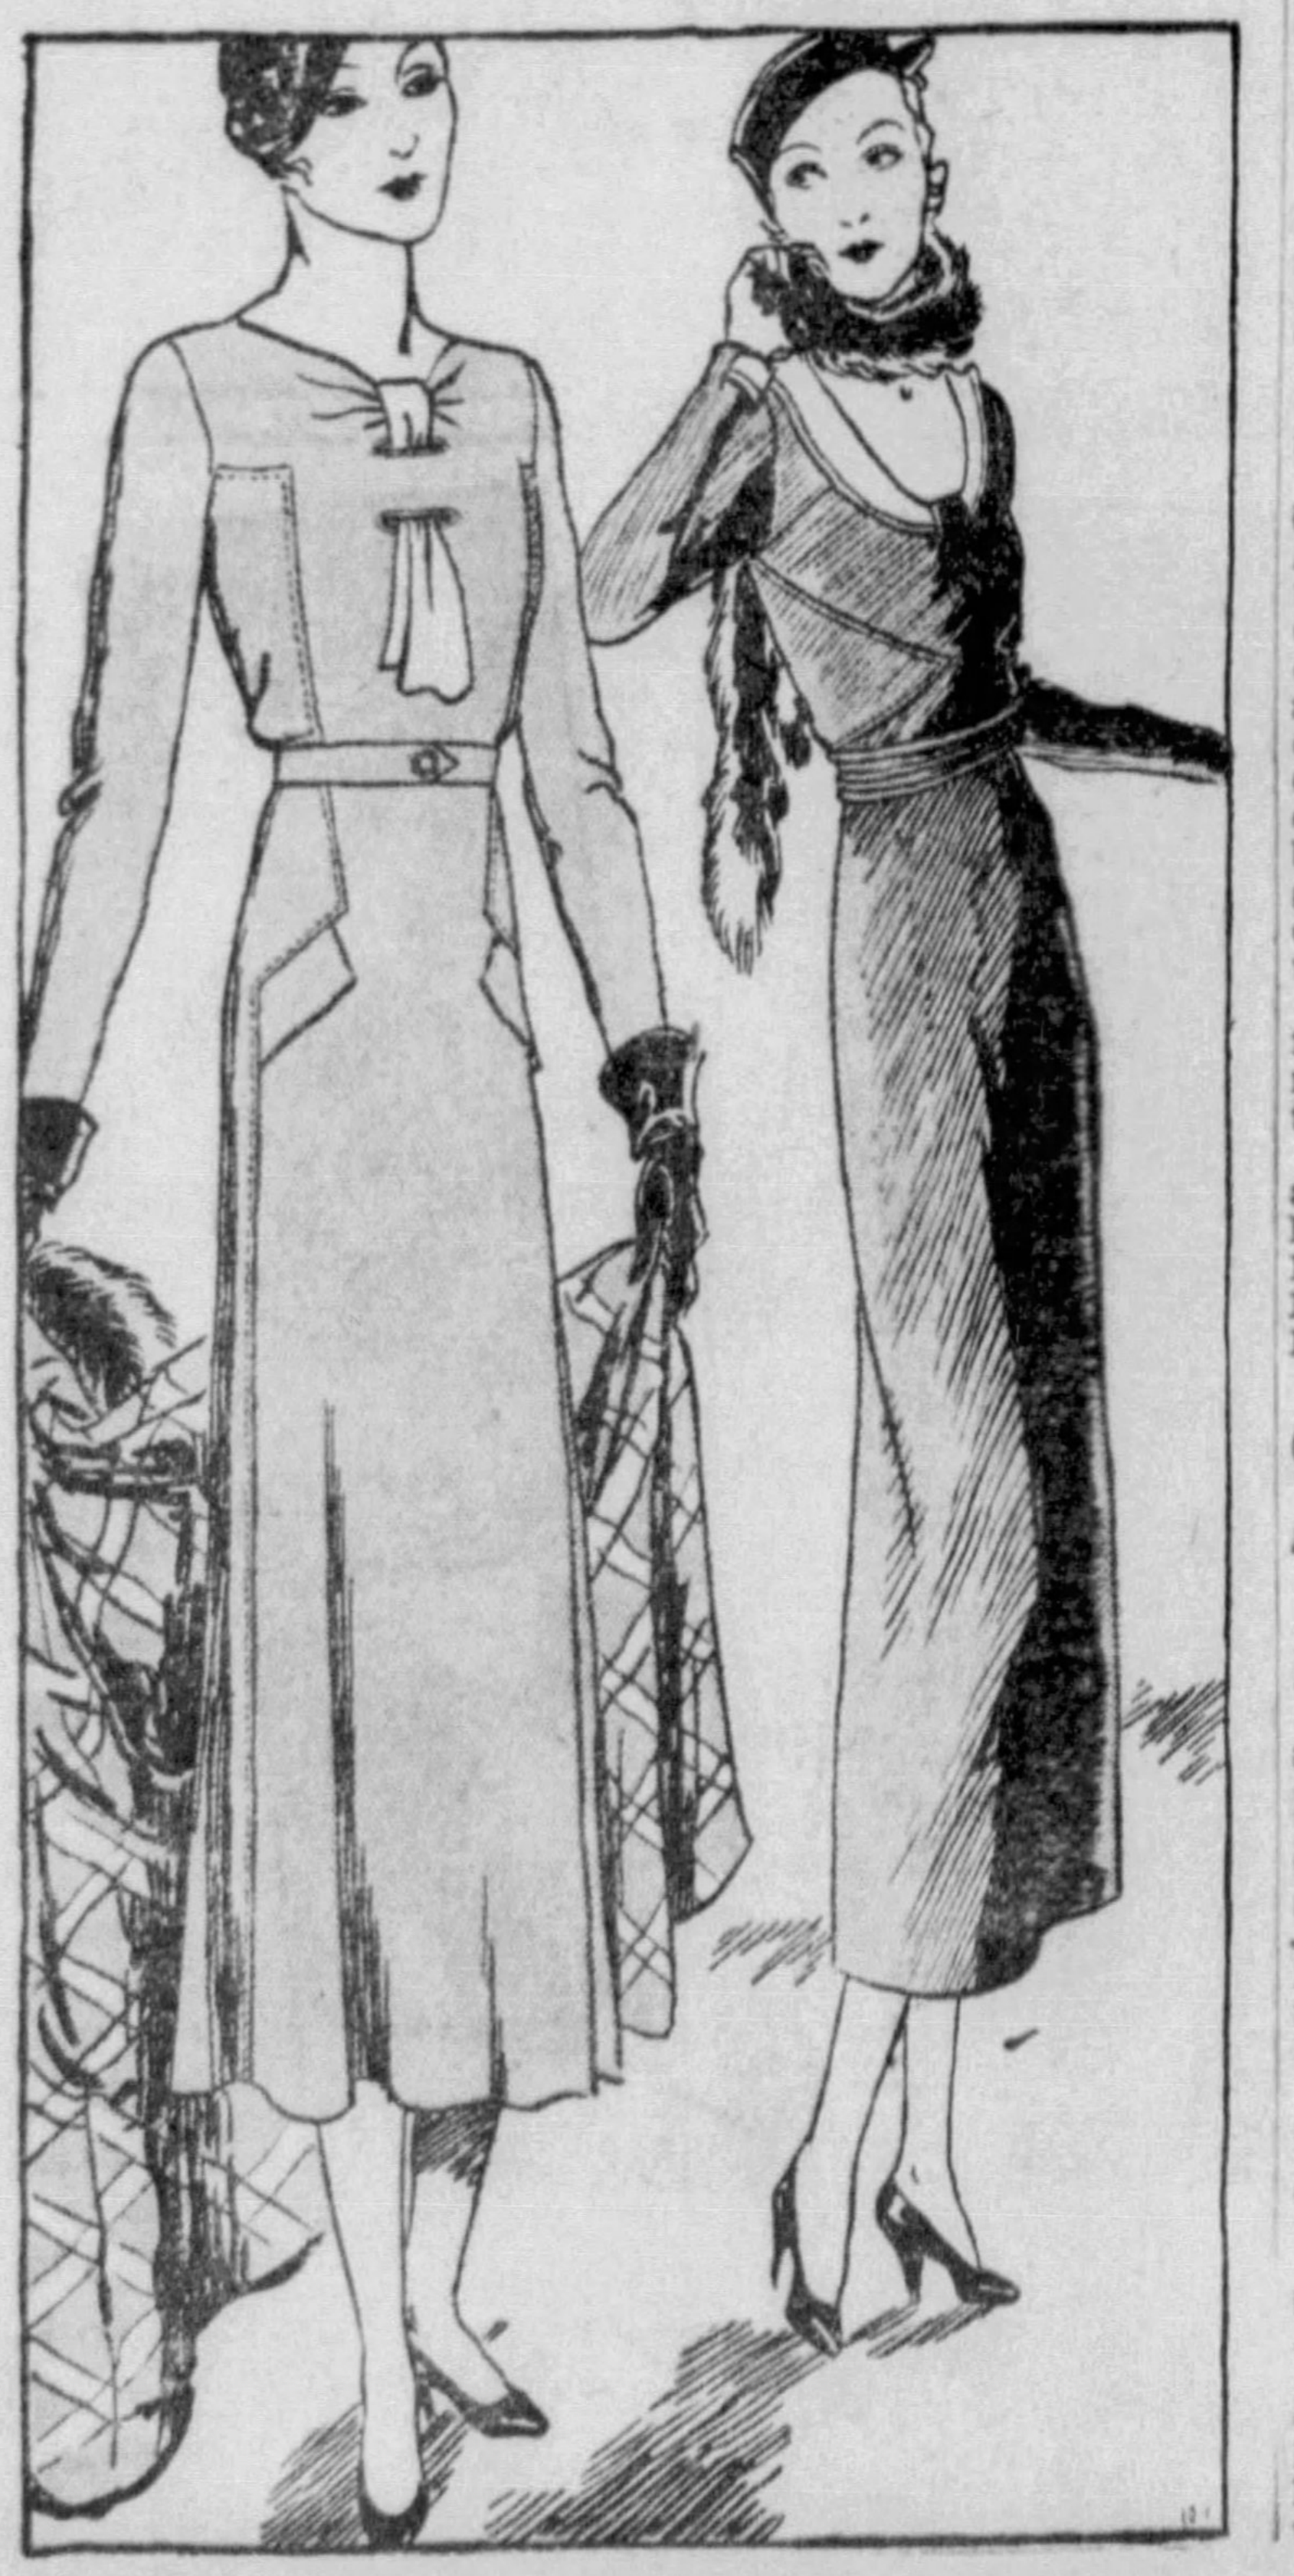
PARIS USES DETACHABLE TRIM AS PRACTICAL FASHION DEVICE

—Sketched in Paris—



Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The Paris designers have learned, within the last few months, at least one good American dressmaking trick. It is the detachable trimming trick—that thrifty device by which one dress may be made to wear a dozen disguises, a dozen color schemes, or a dozen necklines with just a few gestures.

* * *

AMERICAN WOMEN have long known the method. A new kind of collar, a scarf tied in a new way—and they have made a plain dress into a fashionable frock; and above all, a frock which looks different from the way it looked before. It is a bit of cleverness which, nowadays, is not beneath the most lofty of the Paris couturiers—those designers who make clothes for the fussiest audience in the world.

* * *

IT IS TO the credit of these French that they have done the job well. Their collars, their trimming, their added bits of color may be detachable, but there is every reasono for their looking otherwise. A frock which will give every appearance of having its white yoke sewn into its wool fabric will turn out to be a combination affair which may not only be worn with the detachable white yoke, but with many other collars and scarfs as well.

* * *

THE FAUVETY dress at the left, in today's sketch, is shown with the simplest of ties—a touch of beige silk on a dress of dark red wool. The same dress may be worn with a brown wool scarf pulled through the two slashes at the front, or with a lace scarf which circles the neckline, passes through the slashes, then circles the waist as a belt.

* * *

THE DETACHABLE white collar on the brown Fauvety frock at the right falls to a deep V-shape at the back, where it fastens, via button and buttonhole, just above the waistline.

Cause and Cure of War Session Ends With Talk by Pastor

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The hope of America is to get people to say now, when there is no war on the horizon, that they will never support another war, the Rev. Herbert B. Hudnut, pastor of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church, said yesterday. Mr. Hudnut's address, brief, quietly forceful and telling in every sentence, closed the Western Pennsylvania session in the nation-wide cause and cure of war committee marathon round tables. It was held at the William Penn Hotel.

The World War did three things, Mr. Hudnut said: it completely took away religion from a great many people; to a few it brought deep religious experiences, otherwise civilization would have been despaired of, and it gave to the people of today a great cause to which to dedicate themselves—peace.

The war lords don't want men of morals, he went on, they want beasts, for war is a whirlpool of lust; you can't mix religion and war any more than you can mix pink tea and nitroglycerin; religion sold out to the war lords for spot cash. Mr. Hudnut said he takes his stand for peace so that children may know a better world than the mad one which he went through.

Mrs. J. Howard Dice was chosen as Western Pennsylvania representative to the national marathon in Washington next month. She will carry to that body the findings of yesterday's session—that the trend of world affairs does not indicate immediate peace, but that it will come eventually; that yesterday's gathering was divided in opinion concerning entrance to the League of Nations, but unanimous in belief that peace organizations should co-ordinate and more political pressure for peace should be brought.

Hadassah Busy With Member Campaign

Pittsburgh Hadassah members will have a busy week-end doing their part in inaugurating the national membership campaign. This afternoon the regular monthly meeting is being held in the Y. M. & W. H. A. with Irwin A. Swiss speaking on "Glimpses Into Jewish Literature."

Tomorrow afternoon the home of Mrs. Abe Ohringer, Beacon street, will be the scene of a musicale-tea arranged by the committee on membership of which Mrs. Joseph Malakoff is chairman. The program will be by Miss Lura Stover, recent radio audition winner.

Mrs. Julius H. Cohen, president of the local chapter, announces that Hadassah Sabbath will be observed in many Jewish places of worship tomorrow evening and Saturday morning. Rabbi Herman Hailperin, of the Tree of Life Synagogue; Rabbi Goodman A. Rose, of the Beth Shalom, and Rabbi B. A. Lichter, of the B'Nai Israel Synagogue, will deliver appropriate sermons.

Men More Interested When Girls Are Difficult

Should a girl ask her "steady" his intentions—

Or should she let him hang around, month after month, monopolizing her time and affections, with never a mention of marriage?

Once upon a time girls did just that; couldn't do otherwise—females' fortunes being what they were. But times have changed, plenty, for the modern miss, who doesn't have to dangle around waiting for any young man to make up his mind.

And so—

Shall Jerry be modern, or maidenly?

Dear Sally:

I read your column often, and I am wondering if you could give me some advice on my problem. You help so many people.

I am a girl 24 years old, and for the past six months I have been going with a young man who is 29. I see him on an average twice a month, and sometimes oftener.

He says he loves me, but in all this time he has never mentioned marriage.

Naturally, since he is nice and interesting, I grow fonder of him each time I see him, and somehow I am drifting away from my other boy friends, on account of him and the way I feel about him.

IS PUZZLED

What do you think I should do? Should I take the initiative in this case and find out just where I stand? Or should I just let things drift and take their natural course? Incidentally, during the time that I don't see him he never even calls up to say "Hello" or ask how I am.

All this is making me wonder just what is what, and whether I should take him seriously when he talks about loving me, or not. Do you think he does, and I should?

Please help me with some of your good, sensible advice. I feel that I need it, because this has me all tangled up, and I don't know just what to think or to do.

I will be looking for your answer, as I am very serious myself, and I would like to have your opinion about what I should do. JERRY.

What should you do?

Be your own, gay, natural self, Jerry.

Be your own gay, natural self, with a life crammed full of 57 varieties of fun and interest. Make all the friends you can, and go out with them all. In short, fill each day as full of joy as you possibly can—for you'll only live that day once, youngster, and if you waste it in empty longing and futile dreaming, it will be just your bad luck.

NEEDS COMPETITION

"But what has all this to do with the man?" you ask.

It has everything to do with him. It will make him "come clean" without your needing to ask his intentions.

If he isn't seriously interested yet, it may make him become so. For you'll no longer be lying around waiting for him to pay you a little attention. Instead, you'll be hard to reach, and your new friends will be giving him plenty of competition. All of which are ideal conditions for arousing love.

For no man ever yet valued anything he could get for nothing, and if you make yourself difficult, you'll probably also make yourself 100 per cent more desirable.

And if he is serious about you—well, this new program will cause him to do some rapid thinking and effective talking.

And if he has no intention of being serious? Then you'll know it, and the sooner you know it, the better for you, my dear. So in any case, you stand to win. Then—let's go!

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

A Midnight Quest Is Started

"I want you to know," Mrs. Barnes said quietly, "that few things are impossible for us to do in this awful emergency. We will go directly to the saleswomen you wish to see. But—it might save time, and narrow down the chances of publicity, if you could tell me just what you are planning."

"Oh! Forgive me," I pleaded. "It was so fantastic a notion that I dreaded to mention it. But here it is. The neighbor of your maid Rose told her that two girls who, he thought, were Whitney Hall pupils, went away in an automobile with a man, who had slowed down his car and talked to them. The girls, when they left, had plaid coats. That appeared to eliminate the possibility of the automobile. But Mrs. Underwood says Marion did not possess either a plaid coat or a red one."

"That proves nothing," Mrs. Barnes said with a rueful little smile. "In common with all other schools for girls, we have a rule against borrowing each other's possessions, but it is one of those rules which we in authority find it wise to ignore. You might as well tell a girl not to breathe as not to consider her belongings and those of her friends a sort of community chest. We only keep the rule for our protection in special flagrant cases. But Marion and Carolyn might very well have been wearing the plaid coats of their friends."

"Have you seen any reversible coats in the school—plaid on one side and red on the other?" I asked.

TO INVESTIGATE

Mrs. Barnes gave a little exclamation and struck her hands together.

"No, I haven't," she said, "but one of the shops exhibited a new line of such coats only three days ago. Marion and Carolyn may have bought two of them. Is that your idea?"

"Yes," I said, "although an improbable one."

"Instead, very probable," she returned, and my pulses leaped. "Both girls are always well supplied with money, and in the first of the school year some of the girls do not deposit all their money in the school bank, as is the custom. Marion and Carolyn may very well have bought those coats. Indeed, now that I think of it, the girls who told me how they were dressed may have said their 'new' plaid coats, although I am not sure of that.

"But we can know about the purchase within 20 minutes, if you will come with me to the home of Frances Jenkins, the head saleswoman in the shop displaying those coats. She is a marvelous person and the soul of discretion."

"I must speak to Mr. Underwood first," I said. "I am sure he will insist upon our having sufficient escort upon our errand. They are taking no chances just now."

"I suppose not," she said, "but I never should have thought of the necessity." And I knew that the intrepid mistress of Whitney Hall spoke only the truth, and that where the interests of her charges were in question she took no heed of personal danger or discomfort.

VISITS SALESWOMAN

We went back into the sitting room where Dr. Barnes, Harry Underwood, Ronald and Mary were sitting in the dispirited silence of those who for the moment have come to an impasse, and have nothing to do. But when, refusing to sit down, I explained my theory and our intention to interview Miss Jenkins, they were all animated approval.

"I'll take you down at once," Harry Underwood spoke with decision.

"We'll take Mary along," I said, realizing the girl's anxiety to be doing something, anything, to occupy her tortured mind.

"Will you stay to help me?" Dr. Barnes asked Ronald, and the boy's eyes showed his gratitude at the tactful proffer.

Our departure was almost a matter of seconds, so anxious were we all to be doing something, and in less than five minutes we were at the door of a small but attractive frame house, set in a yard filled with shrubbery, and Harry Underwood was ringing the bell while we three women stayed upon the walk in full view of the upper front windows.

"Miss Jenkins lives with her mother," Mrs. Barnes explained. "There are no men in the house, and I do not wish to frighten her."

The next second there came a voice from an upper window, though its owner was invisible."

"Who is there?"

Household Hints

To prevent sausages bursting dip them in boiling water before frying.

When aluminum pans become dull and black-looking clean them with a soft cloth dipped in lemon juice. Rinse in warm water.

Prunes soaked in water for two days are equal to, or better than, prunes cooked over the gas. Hence saving of gas and labor. A little sugar should be added.

For non-greasy marks on delicate fabrics try some ground rice. Shake a little of the rice over the mark and rub into the stuff gently with the forefinger. With perseverance the mark will quite disappear. This is a method used by many of the large stores when garments in stock have become marked in some way.

Personalities, like colors, are always more pleasing in the undertones than the overtones.

A bright spot of color can be very pleasing, but a whole room done in flame color would be very trying.

Vivacious persons are very interesting at first, but after a few hours of them one feels quite weary.

The actress or the singer who intends to do a big scene or sing a very high loud note, acts or sings quietly previous to this so that it seems the greater and more impressive by contrast.

Good judgment is most often proved by elimination.

And what one does not do can often please more, and prove better taste than anything one might do.

It is always better to underdo than overdo!

Contract Bridge -:- -:-

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Trumping Your Partner's Ace

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

After all, occasionally there is something to be said in defense of that most abused of all Bridge players, the player who trumps his partner's Ace, and on one particular hand an extremely strong case can be made for the player who not only trumped her partner's Ace, but used the Ace of trumps to do it.

Most Bridge players consider that the Ace of trumps is good for a trick at any time, and few would have the vision displayed by Mrs. George U. Harris in a Rubber game at Crockford's Club, New York's latest temple of Bridge, whereby, through trumping the Opening lead of an Ace by her partner, she defeated the contract that would otherwise have been made.

South—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North:
♠ 875
♥ KQJ
♦ AQJ9
♣ 753

West:
♥ A109876 5432
♣ AQ8

Mrs. Harris (East):
♠ A2
♦ 108765 432
♣ J109

South:
♠ KQJ109643
♦ K
♣ K642

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West's opening lead was the heart Ace, and when the Dummy was spread on the table, South, the Declarer, felt reasonably sure that his contract was safe. A discard of two losing clubs apparently was assured on the two diamonds, and thus, whether or not a heart trick was made, the only losers would be two clubs and one trump. South reckoned, however, without the defense which Mrs. Harris put up.

She could see the probability of South obtaining discards on Dummy's high cards. Therefore, after considering the matter carefully, she trumped the Ace of hearts with the Ace of trumps, then led the Knave of clubs. This defense defeated the contract 1 trick and was the only means of preventing South from making game. To trump with the deuce would permit South to trump with the trey, and the club discards would be taken on the diamonds, and the safety of the contract assured. To discard would bring the same result. It is thus evident that it is not always a "dumb" play to trump your partner's Ace, particularly if you use the Ace of trumps to do so.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

If I bid one notrump and make two, what is the score above the line; or if I bid two notrump and make three, what is the score above the line?

Answer: In the first case, you would score 30 points below the line and 40 above the line in honor column; in the second, you would score 70 points below the line and 30 above the line.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Large knuckles should be anointed with cocoa butter, rubbed and kneaded crosswise. They develope sometimes through the practice of keeping the hands in hot or cold water while doing housework.

There's a new fad now, not to use complexion powder or rouge but to concentrate on eye shadows and lip stick. All right for the darlings who were born with the skin of dull finish, but it won't work for the gal whose skin is inclined to be oily. As for cheek paint, it would be a relief to be rid of it. Or at least, to have it toned down.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Introduction in Order

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help solve a problem which my girl friend and I have argued about?

A says when two friends are walking and one encounters another friend and stops to talk it is improper to introduce this acquaintance on the street. B claims that it is very impolite to converse with this friend leaving the other unintroduced and apart from the conversation. Who is correct?

I wish to compliment your very helpful column. I.

If the meeting is only for a second or two . . . just, perhaps, to say "How do you do" and shake hands . . . it is not necessary to make this introduction. For such a quick meeting, there is a distinct tendency in this country now, as there always has been abroad, not to make this introduction.

But if there is any duration to the meeting . . . if the two people meeting really start a conversation, then it does seem rude and thoughtless not to make these people known to each other so that all the group may take part in the conversation. Otherwise, the one not introduced certainly feels awkward and out of things.

OFFICIAL LAUDS 'AD' AGENCIES

Mr. Gamble

Advertising occupies an important position with the general public by acquainting people with products and services, Frederic R. Gamble, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies emphasized during a regional meeting here yesterday of the organization's local advertising agency members.

Stressing that advertising succeeds chiefly as it serves public interest, Gamble explained the agency's importance:

"Agency men are, by nature, promotive and are busy seeking new products, new uses for old products and new ideas for advertising them. Agency men have constantly grown in the breadth of view which they have applied to advertising problems. They are an influence upon consumer needs."

Local agency members are A. P. Hill Company, Ketchum, MacLeod and Grove, Inc.; Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne; and the G. M. Basford Company.

Motor Fatalities Show Gain Here

Fatal motor accidents increased 27.3 per cent in October, 1932, in Pittsburgh, over the total for the same month a year ago, according to the city's motor vehicle accident report. Thirteen of the 14 deaths reported involved pedestrians. There was, however, a decrease of 16.6 per cent in total collisions and a decrease of 30.6 per cent in all types of motorist law violations.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Diphtheria "Carrier" a Constant Health Menace

Dr. Copeland

According to the United States Public Health Service, thousands of children needlessly die each year from diphtheria. This happens in spite of the protection available against the disease.

It is a pity that most of these fatalities are due to carelessness and neglect on the part of the parents. In most instances the children are believed to be suffering from some minor ailment, but in reality have diphtheria. Often the disease is not recognized until it is too late.

Diphtheria is caused by a germ called the "diphtheria bacillus." This germ grows and rapidly multiplies in the nose and throat. Sometimes it is found in milk. Contaminated milk may produce a severe epidemic of diphtheria.

Contrary to a common belief, the germs of this disease die quickly when exposed to the action of sunlight and dry air. The danger of transmission is chiefly from the freshly infected secretions from the nose or throat of a sufferer from this disease.

Another menace is found in that person who is a "carrier" of this disease. A diphtheria carrier is an individual who carries the diphtheria germs in his nose or throat without himself suffering from the disease. It is estimated that 1 to 2 per cent of the general population are diphtheria carriers. After an epidemic this percentage may be higher.

Diphtheria carriers and those persons who have the mild and unsuspected form of diphtheria are a source of danger to children and adults. They are unaware that they are dangerous, and of course are constantly in contact with healthy persons. They transfer the disease, either directly or indirectly.

A common method of direct contact is through kissing. But it is probable diphtheria is most frequently transmitted by the indirect method. A common drinking cup, the drinking fountain, pencils, pins, needles, pipes, forks and spoons are contaminated by a diphtheria carrier or infected person. Their use by others results in trouble.

We are constantly exposed to the dangers of diphtheria. Fortunately, not all persons exposed to diphtheria contract the disease. This is because some have developed an "immunity" to diphtheria. This is an "acquired immunity" and is not found in children as frequently as in adults. By means of the "Schick test" it is possible to determine the presence or absence of this immunity.

If absent, it means that if the child is exposed to diphtheria, he will contract the disease. This child should receive complete protection against diphtheria by the "immunization" treatment. This is simple, consisting of the injection of three doses of "toxin-antitoxin," given at weekly intervals. Six months after the last injection, it is advisable to repeat the Schick test to determine whether sufficient immunity against diphtheria is present.

The Schick test or some modification of it, should be given every child. It affords a means of protection that should not be overlooked. It is wiser to have the Schick test made than to expose your child to the possibility and danger of contracting this serious disease.

If more attention were given to the various rules of personal hygiene there would be far less disease. If all individuals who are likely to have diphtheria were given proper immunization, eventually diphtheria would be eradicated.

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Pitt All-Opponent Team. Herman Deal Aids Cubs. Record Football Scores. • Vince's Removal Denied. Baseball Radio Optional. Air Travel by Boxers.

KAVEL AMONG BEST MET BY PANTHERS

ONE "ALL" TEAM in football that is not mere guesswork and that may be taken at face value is an all-opponents eleven. The players in that lineup are not men who have only been heard about, nor are they men who, though seen in action, are being picked over others who have not been seen, without a chance for comparison. They are selected from among the gridders whom the pickers have actually played against, and such a list, therefore, unlike the average "all" team, may be accepted as being just what it is supposed to be.

George Kavel

In voting on the best players they faced at the various positions in their 10 games during the season, the Pitt Panthers name one local gridder in George Kavel, of Carnegie Tech, at halfback, and distribute the remaining awards among six other teams. The ends selected are King, of Army, and Gillman, of Ohio State; the tackles, Kurth, of Notre Dame, and Colehower, of Penn, the latter just a shade ahead of Rosequist, of Ohio State, in the balloting; the guards, Corbus, of Stanford, and Summerfelt, of Army; center, Ely, of Nebraska; quarterback, Vidal, of Army, with Cramer, of Ohio State, a close second; halfbacks, Kavel, of Carnegie Tech, and a slight edge for Koken, of Notre Dame, over Fields, of Army; fullback, Sauer, of Nebraska.

IT MAY HAVE been, on the Reds' side, a case of getting rid of a dissatisfied player who had openly declared he did not want to remain in Cincinnati because he "couldn't make many home runs in such a big park," and perhaps also the Red owners needed some money, but on the face of it the Cubs appear to have got the better of the deal whereby they acquired Outfielder Babe Herman. At that, the Bruins may have to take out those left-center seats to get the benefit of Herman's left-hand hitting.

Donie Bush probably knows better than anyone else what he needs, but it is hard to see what use he can have for two more outfielders like Johnny Moore and Lance Richbourg, when he has Hafey, Crabtree, Douthit and others. Bob Smith isn't the pitcher he used to be, and Rolly Hemsley isn't easy to handle. Maybe Bush has a second trade in mind.

AFTER DIGGING THROUGH decades of ancient dope, some gridiron historians report that they can find nothing in the records of college football to equal the score of 137 to 0 which West Liberty Teachers rolled up against Cedarville College.

They figure that the score sets a new record, displacing one that had stood for 28 years. The closest approach to it that could be found was the rout of West Virginia by Michigan in 1904.

THAT WAS THE game in which Hurry Up Yost's point-a-minute team buried the Mountaineers under a score of 135 to 0. It was the peak scoring achievement of the famous eleven that included Willie Heston, Shorty Longman, the Hammonds, Babe Carter, Joe Curtis, Schultz, Shulte, Norcross and other stars of that era, a team that averaged 210 pounds in the line and had three backs able to do the hundred on cleats in 10.2 seconds. However, there have been higher scores in high school games and by at least one college team. Georgia Tech once defeated Cumberland, Tenn., 222 to 0 in a 45-minute game. Haven (Kan.) High School defeated Sylvia High, 256 to 0 in 1929, and Staunton (Ill.) High defeated Gillespie High, 232 to 0.

Ralph Vince

BECAUSE THE TEAM had a run of tough luck in the form of injuries to backfield mainstays and lost four of its 10 games, rumors were circulated that Ralph Vince, former W. & J. player and head football coach at John Carroll in Cleveland since 1927, would be deposed in favor of Don Miller, for four years backfield coach at Ohio State.

Miller, one of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen, was picked for the post because it was known he planned to quit at Ohio State to give more time to his law practice in Cleveland, where his brother, Ray T. Miller, is Mayor. But the rumors are vigorously denied at John Carroll. Athletic officials there say the agitation for Vince's removal has come from sources outside the university interested chiefly in the appointment of Miller. This activity is said to have hurt rather than helped Miller's chance to land the job.

SPECULATION ON COACHING changes for next season must include Holy Cross. Contrary to early reports, things are not definitely set there for 1933 in the matter of replacing McEwen.

Worcester reports say that the college will not designate one of the present staff to take complete charge next fall. The offense didn't click under Corcoran and Cervini. For 57 minutes of the Brown game, Holy Cross looked like a champion Eastern team, but after that the Crusaders failed to score a point for the remainder of the season, going scoreless against Harvard, Manhattan and Boston College.

THOUGH IT HAS been understood that the question of broadcasting major league baseball games next season would be voted on by the leagues as a whole at their coming annual meetings, with the decision of the majority to be the law for all, President William Harridge, of the American League, intimates that the local option system will be continued. "The matter of broadcasting is up to the individual club owners," Harridge is quoted. "I have no stock in any club. So far as I know, our owners will decide for themselves what they want to do. It will be, as usual, up to the individual club owner to do as he sees fit."

A GLANCE AROUND the American League circuit would give the impression that no club has any urgent need for a new first baseman.

Yet Clark Griffith figures on getting the pitcher he wants for Washington by trading Harley Boss, recruit first sacker, who had a big season and a batting average of .338 for Chattanooga in the Southern Association.

FIDEL LA BARBA did not cause any commotion in Eastern boxing circles when, with Manager George Blake, he made the trip from Los Angeles to New York by airplane for the featherweight championship fight with Kid Chocolate, scheduled for one week from Friday night.

As Wilbur Wood observes, that's old stuff now. It's no longer considered news when a boxer takes to the air. Gene Tunney was the first to fly to the scene of a contest, riding in a plane from Stroudsburg to Philadelphia for his initial title match with Jack Dempsey in 1926, much to the dismay of Tex Rickard.

Fidel La Barba

IT HAS BEEN done by a number of others since that time. But Tunney was not the first glove fighter to ride the clouds. That distinction belongs to Georges Carpentier, who was an aviator for France during the war. Young Stribling makes flying a hobby and uses his plane to hop from fight to fight. Before the Cleveland title fight in 1931 he flew over Max Schmeling's training camp in an attempt to upset the German's morale, but Max was unimpressed. Schmeling himself has since done considerable flying as a passenger, chiefly in Europe. Tommy Paul was a licensed pilot with a plane of his own.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

There's method in the madness of Lew Raymond, the "mad matchmaker" of the Arena, on the North Side, who is operating week in and week out and making the tough times like it.

Lew Raymond

Sometimes he has a "hot" show, sometimes a just so-so show. But he's always shooting for the moon and as often as not hitting the stars and having them drop into what passes for his lap.

For tomorrow night, he has Frankie Goosby, local Negro welterweight star, against Johnny Peppe, of Philadelphia, for his main bout, and Johnny (K. O.) Roberts, of Huntington, W. Va., against Sunny Jim McVey in his eight-round semi-final.

SHADE TO BOX WINNER

What's the Peppe-Goosby thing mean? Well, on the surface, very little, but it's just the forerunner of something bigger and better, sort of paving the way as it were. And what is the bigger and better item, if any?

Dave Shade against the winner. It's been quite a few years, plus a few days, since Shade last showed here, against Jack Perry at Motor Square Garden. He was up around the top then, and he's still there, outfoxing all of the youngsters with his colorful, weaving style. The match is planned for Friday night of next week.

KING-YAROSZ SIGNED

If you should happen to corner Raymond in a dark alley and stick a knife against his heart and a gun against his temple he'll probably confess up and tell you that he has the rematch between Jack King and Ted Yarosz all sewed up in the burlap for delivery on December 16, two weeks from tomorrow night. But use your own gun and your own knife. This is just a tip. It seems that it is supposed to be a secret that King and Yarosz are going to fight again because this writer and one of the judges of the bout and probably half of the fans who saw it contended King really was the winner when they battled in the same ring a few weeks ago. There's been a lot of this and that about a return bout, but it's in, brothers, just waiting for somebody to make Raymond admit it.

Meanwhile Motor Square Garden will be closed to boxing again next Monday night. Its next show is planned for the following Monday, but at the rate things are moving in the East End arena the club probably will be lucky to get in a show for Christmas afternoon, and starting in cold on the holiday won't be such a good idea, either.

RODGERS DENIES KNOCKOUT

The Garden was planning a Johnny Datto-Battling Gizzy match for a week from Monday, but Datto is booked in Philadelphia a week from tonight and that will allow only four nights to intervene between the dates, and the commission rules call for five, so that's out. The signing of Yarosz to meet King again on December 16 takes him off the Garden list for at least a month. He was to box there last Monday night, but the club was unable to land an opponent for him.

Jackie Rodgers, local Negro featherweight boxer, denies he suffered a technical knockout in his bout with Wilbur Chevalier, of Toledo, at Newark, O., last Monday night, as reported. He says he was leading all of the way for five rounds and then began to coast when he found his opponent too tough to knock out, and was warned by the referee to speed up. When he failed to do so, Rodgers says, the referee halted the bout, disqualified him and declared Chevalier the winner, but not on a technical knockout.

'Bama on Scene Of Grid Battle

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Alabama's football team, 32 strong, rested from its transcontinental trip today and only light workouts were in order in preparation for the clash with the St. Mary's Saturday.

The Southerners tried out the field of battle at Kezar Stadium after their arrival yesterday. Two workouts today and another tomorrow and they will be ready for the Gaels.

BRITISH STARS WIN

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The visiting British tennis stars, Edward Avory and John S. Oliff, continue to advance in the International Tennis Tournament yesterday. Avory took a hard three-set match from Ricardo Pernambuco, 6-4, 8-6, 6-2 while Oliff defeated Nelson Cruz, 6-3, 6-1, 9-7.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE FASCIATED TREE—It usually is a matter of years before a tree is old enough to have its leaves counted by the scores, but, in the electric hothouse of the General Electric Company in Schenectady, N. Y., there is a grapefruit plant which attained to this status in 13 days. Fasciation claimed this particular seedling as its victim, with the result that the tiny plant tried to grow all of its leaves at once, although it is less than two inches in height. The seed of this plant, as well as of many others, was subjected to the effect of 200,000-volt X-rays before planting, in an investigation of the effects of X-rays on plants.

JAQUES MADE U. S. G. A. HEAD

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Herbert Jaques, of Boston, a track star in his college days at Harvard, today holds the honor of being the nominee to succeed H. H. Ramsay as president of the United States Golf Association. The formality of electing him will take place at the annual meeting here January 7.

Jaques was named in place of the late Robert M. Cutting, who died last week, in a supplemental report of the nominating committee, headed by Melvin A. Traylor, made to President Ramsay yesterday.

The nominee has been a member of the executive committee since 1925 and at the time of the nomination of Cutting was selected as the senior vice president for 1933. To fill the latter position, John G. Jackson, of New York, was moved up from junior vice president and Prescott S. Bush, present secretary, was named junior vice president.

Jaques graduated at Harvard in 1911. In his senior year he was captain of the cross-country team.

Court Dismisses Suit of Umpire

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 1.—(AP.)—James Murray, former American Association umpire, came out second best in his $25,000 suit against Thomas J. Hickey, president of the American Association.

Circuit Judge Otto H. Breidenbach late yesterday instructed a jury to bring in a verdict in favor of Hickey.

Murray's suit was based on the charge that Hickey had prevented him from obtaining employment as an umpire in organized baseball.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Tom Thorp, veteran football official and sports scribe of the New York Evening Journal, doesn't think much of the Pitt Panthers—NOT MUCH . . . He served as umpire of Pitt's closing game of the season, with Stanford, and here are some excerpts from his review of the battle in his paper . . . "Pittsburgh looks like the national football champion . . . Victories over Stanford, Notre Dame and the Army give Pitt a well-defined lead over the rest of the field.

"Pittsburgh had to be good to beat Stanford . . . Glenn (Pop) Warner had his Palo Alto collegians all pepped up. They played hard and cleverly throughout the 60 minutes of play . . . But the double spinners and reverse runs and forwards from similar formations, which threw a fine Dartmouth team into a panic last November up at Cambridge, failed to fool Jock Sutherland's Golden Panthers to any great extent.

"The West Coast eleven gained some first downs. But they found the defense of the Pittsburgh rushline a far more difficult proposition to gain through than they encountered against Southern California, California, Washington or any other Far West set of forwards . . . After the game, the lads from Palo Alto freely admitted the Pittsburgh line was the best they had encountered this season.

"Much of the success of the Golden Panthers this season is due to a first-class forward wall . . . It is hard to conceive how any coach could develop a stronger or more qualified set of rushline players. The rushline moves forward on the attack without a hole in it . . . Defensively it is as finely equipped as any rushline that we have watched work in many years.

"Cuba, at tackle, and Tormey, at center, are two of the outstanding linemen of the season. Both rate all-America places . . . While Sutherland has strength in his forward line, the consistent ball-carrying ability of Heller, Sebastian and Weinstock is the major factor in the success of the Golden Panthers.

"Heller is without question the best all-round back in the country. The Pittsburgh star can kick, run, block, tackle and act either on the throwing or receiving end of a forward pass . . . He is the star who is given the ball in the tight spots. The way he has acquitted himself makes him a standout in any company . . . Sebastian and Weinstock are good ball-carriers. Both will improve with this year's experience under their belts.

"Dailey and Skladany are fine extremity guardians. Many who have watched Skladany play throughout the season consider him as the choice for one of the places on the All-Eastern teams. He is fast on his feet, a clever tackler, good man in the open to gather in a forward pass and has yet to let any back get outside of him . . . His work has been outstanding all season."

Almost unheralded and unsung, a Dutch boxer has made his bow in New York rings flashing signs that he may be our next lightweight champion of the world . . . He is Bep Van Klaveren, and he already holds the European lightweight championship . . . He made his American debut recently by

A. A. MAY MEET INTL. CLUBS

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—A revolutionary plan to have the International League and American Association baseball clubs play an inter-league schedule, cutting their own schedules down to provide for the games, was put forward today by Frank Shaughnessy, general manager of the Montreal Royals, of the International.

Shaughnessy, also proponent of the plan for a playoff series in the International after the close of the season along the same lines as that used by the National Hockey League, said he would present his inter-league proposal to the National Association convention in Columbus, O., next week.

The plan would provide for each team in the International to play a home-and-home series with each team in the American Association. This would add 48 games to each schedule and necessitate cutting the intra-league schedules to a probable 112-game basis, instead of the 168-game schedule now played.

HICKEY FAVORS PLAN

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—President Thomas J. Hickey, of the American Association, today said that he had not heard of any movement to play an inter-league schedule with the International League, but that such a proposal, blocked by the World War, was enthusiastically planned in 1918.

President Hickey said American Association club owners probably would give the plan, advanced today by Frank Shaughnessy, general manager of the Montreal Maroons, careful consideration during its meeting at Columbus, O., Sunday.

QUIGLEY'S FATHER DIES

CONCORDIA, Kan., Dec. 1.—L. B. Quigley, father of Ernie Quigley, National League umpire, died here yesterday.

DATES FOR TWO FLOOR GAMES APPROVED

We get to thrill to some more Duquesne-Westminster basketball mayhem during the coming college season and if we've the dough, to watch Carnegie Tech and Purdue resume the gridiron acquaintance, struck up in 1931, next fall, according to announcements forthcoming from the inner chambers of the athletic departments on the Bluff and out in Schenley Park.

At a meeting of the Duquesne Athletic Council yesterday, the dates of January 3 and February 4 for games with Westminster were approved. At the same time, Buddy Overend, out at Tech, pulled Max Hannum away from the basketball floor long enough to instruct him to announce that Tech will meet Purdue and Michigan State on the gridiron in 1933. The Skibos meet Purdue at Lafayette, Ind., on November 4 and Michigan State at East Lansing on November 11.

Bucknell will meet Duquesne here on October 6 in a night game and will wind up the season with W. & J. on November 25.

GAME HELD OVER

The Tech-Purdue football affair originally was slated to be played as part of a two-year, home-and-home series, but the boys were unable to find a suitable date for the game this year and consequently, the contest was held over.

One of the big disappointments of last year's college basketball campaign in these parts was that the Dukes and Westminster did not meet. A mixup on dates prevented the rivals getting together, and [illegible] series which annually had [illegible]d capacity crowds and brought [illegible] stunning basketball was [illegible]on-holed.

The Dukes also announced that the two-game series with Pitt and Tech will be played on the home floors of the Panthers and Titans, due to the greater seating capacities of the Stadium Pavilion and the Tartan gymnasium.

FINAL GRID DRILL

Carnegie Tech's footballers put in their final session of the season this afternoon as they put the finishing touches on their game for the meeting with Georgetown in Washington Saturday. The squad departs tomorrow at noon for the site of the battle.

Coach Bob Waddell has been polishing his offense this week. He believes he has the defense cogs of the Tartan machine in o. k. working order and hopes, in this final contest of year, to turn on the scoring power.

The Tipoff

Dick Hanley, while in town here last week taking in the Pitt-Stanford game and anyone who'd listen to him, was on the subject of tough schedule and Pitt's card for this year was mentioned as a point in fact. Mister Hanley exploded. "You talk about tough schedules. Say, how about mine last year? All I had to do was open with Nebraska and then take Notre Dame and about seven Big Ten Conference games in a row. Sure, Pitt had a tough row, but don't think your Uncle Dick had a setup in '31, either."

It was unfortunate that Warren Heller, Pitt's crack halfbacker, had to stay, or stayed, in the entire game with Stanford. What an ovation he'd have received if he'd been taken out of the action before the crowd left. They gave Welch a great one his last game, but Heller's would have caused the Cathedral of L'arnin' to sway.

Biff Jones, who made his name as a coach at Army, hasn't done badly at all with his Louisiana Staters this year. Biff's team hasn't been beaten yet and does not figure to be. The Army would like to have kept Jones, but Biff's four-year stretch on the Plains was up and he had to move on. He's a swell feller.

It is remarkable the way the folks in the East went for this Army team. They lost sight of the fact that the Cadets were primed for Pitt as they were primed for no other foe all season. After meeting, and losing to, the Panthers, they went out and walloped Yale and Harvard and a couple small school elevens and had one heck of a time beating West Virginia Wesleyan, 7 to 0. Yale and Harvard hardly are to be classed as first-rate elevens, except as they rank in the game's tradition.

Notre Dame lost to Pitt and appeared to stagger through two or three other games, but you'll note they won and with points to spare. I figured the Irish a cinch to beat the Cadets, for they had more speed and more class than the Soldiers, who, primed to the limit, didn't look within 20 points of the Panthers. Had Pitt wanted to sit on their first two touchdowns, I doubt if the Army would have made such a showing.

Chick Davies is staying awake these nights wondering what in the world he's going to do with all the basketball material at his command. He has more star and veteran players on hand than he needs. Playing almost a strictly district schedule, he and his Dukes are going to enter every game favorites—they can't miss—and like Pitt in football, will find every opponent laying for 'em.—JESS CARNER.

North Siders, Goslin Quintet Score Wins

The North Siders and Goslins, of the West Penn League, are listed among the winners today in local basketball circles, along with the Tecky Juckey team, the I. K. S. and Y. M. H. A. quintets.

The North Siders defeated the South Side Falcons, 54 to 36, last night in the South Side Social Hall, Crum leading the scoring for the victors with 20 points. The Goslins nosed out the Penn Five, 36 to 33.

In the Metropolitan League, the Tecky-Juckey quintet defeated the Sons of Italy, 32 to 24. I. K. S. trimmed Holy Cross, 57 to 26, in a County League tussle, and in an exhibition game, Y. M. H. A. walloped the Wilmerding Y, 35 to 26.

FOUR PANTHERS ON ALL-DISTRICT TEAM

WARREN HELLER MOST VALUABLE TO ELEVEN

By JESS CARVER

There was not an outstanding offensive eleven in the tri-state sector this fall, so the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's 1932 all-district team stacks up as being more of a defensive than an attacking outfit, but at the same time, it would take a pretty powerful defensive unit to hold it scoreless.

Picking an all-district eleven this year was more or less a cinch. When you've players of the ability of Warren Heller, Les Corzine, Tubby Edmundson, Bill Sample and others of that ilk to select from, you can line yourself up a mighty classy aggregation. Which, I think, is about what I've done. Those who think different will form in a line to the right.

My, look at that queue—it looks like a bread line.

PITT BEST TEAM

From the time the '32 campaign opened Pitt's Golden Panthers have almost completely made off with the show as far as the district was concerned. The Panthers were the only outstanding major eleven, and because of their tough schedule, outranked Waynesburg, which went undefeated until its final game with New River.

Hence, four Panthers have been placed on the first team and as many more given honorable mention on the squad. Other schools placing more than one man on the team were Geneva and Carnegie Tech, while West Virginia Wesleyan, Davis Elkins and Duquesne placed one each. In all, 12 of the 15 schools in the Tri-State area had players awarded either team or squad positions.

There were four outstanding ends in the section, but Joe Skladany and Cliff Aultman, of Pitt and Geneva respectively, have been accorded an edge. Both were fine defensive players, able enough on the attack and good pass receivers. Al Krankota, of the Dukes, and Red Stewart, of Tech, pressed them close for first honors.

CUBA, WALTON STRONG

Pitt's two tackles, Paul Cuba and Frank Walton, gave the most consistent exhibitions of tackle play throughout the campaign. They starred against Notre Dame, Army and Stanford. The pair were better on the defense than on the offense, but so were all the other tackle prospects in the list. No team would be weak with Sam Cooper, of Geneva, Croft, of Tech, Niccolai, of the Dukes, or Jim Wallace, of Davis Elkins, in the lineup.

Bill Sample, of Tech, and Nick DeCarbo, of the Dukes, were outstanding among the guards. Sample was handicapped by injuries and missed a most important game, the one with Notre Dame, but he made up for his absence in this tussle with sparkling performances against Pitt and N. Y. U. DeCarbo was the defensive mainstay of the Duquesne eleven all season.

Edmundson, West Virginia Wesleyan's veteran pivot man, was as good a center as there was in the East. He played in all of Wesleyan's games, and did not have a single bad day. Joe Tormey was on a par with the Bobcat star, but did not see as much service as his rival.

There wasn't a really outstanding quarterback in the layout, but Art Grahame stood head and shoulders above what there were. He could kick, pass and run, and as a whole his blocking was nothing to write home about, he used his coco and was consistent.

HELLER BEST BACK

Heller and Kavel, along with Johnson, of St. Vincent, were far and away the best halfbacks. Heller, dubbed the "perfect halfback," was the most valuable man to his team in the country. He could pass and run and glittered on the defense. Kavel, fast and hard-hitting, was the mainstay of the Tech team. Johnson, of St. Vincent, was a high scorer and a fine all-round performer.

I'll take Cam Henderson's word on any player and he tells me Lester Corzine was one of the best fullbacks ever he saw, and I'd like to have a dollar for every good footballer Cam's laid eyes on in the course of his career. Corzine could run and pass and kick and was murderous when it came to backing up a line. He was consistent, too, and never had a bad day. He gets the call over Izzy Weinstock, of Pitt, and Beveridge, of Wesleyan, two good enough fullbacks for any ball club.

The outstanding punt of the season was Bob Hogan's 80-yarder against Notre Dame; the longest field goal Art Grahame's against Waynesburg; the finest pass, Heller's 50-yard heave to Skladany in the Army game and the most sensational run, Shemick's 100-yard return of the kickoff against Bethany.

In closing, these lads placed on this, or any other all-star team, may clip the stories from out the paper, take 'em to a grocery store and with a dime, get a loaf of bread, provided bread isn't 12 cents that day.

BABE HERMAN

HERMAN SENT TO CHICAGO

CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Floyd (Babe) Herman, heavy-slugging but erratic right fielder for the Cincinnati Reds in the season just past, today became the property of the Chicago Cubs—in exchange for four veteran players and a sum of cash.

The new men in the Red fold are Bob Smith, pitcher; Johnny Moore, outfielder; Lance Richbourg, outfileder, and Rollie Hemsley, catcher.

Sidney Weil, president of the Reds club, announced consummation of the deal last night after weeks of negotiation in which he said the Bruin management sought vainly to get Chick Hafey, bespectacled outfielder, who was National League batting champion in 1931. Hafey will stay here, Weil said.

Weil asserted he and Donie Bush, the Reds' new manager, are "more than satisfied with the deal." The club, he explained, has been strengthened and he has more material for possible future deals.

Herman, now in Glendale, Cal., is more than satisfied, in the belief of Weil. Herman, said Weil, "was not especially happy here." He felt Redland Field's expansive grounds cramped his batting, and although he did some brilliant hitting, most of it was in streaks. He drove into more double plays than any other man in the lineup. His batting average was around .325.

Herman was acquired last March from Brooklyn along with Wally Gilbert, third baseman, and Ernie Lombardi, catcher. In return Weil gave Tony Cuccinello, second baseman; Joe Stripp, third baseman, and Clyde Sukeforth, catcher.

EVEN SWAP—GIBSON

Pirate fans today were not unduly excited over the swap completed by the Reds and Cubs. The deal that sent Babe Herman to Chicago in return for Bob Smith, Rolly Hemsley, Lance Richbourg and Johnny Moore, plus a bundle of cash, has so many angles it is difficult to name the winner.

The Reds scored one big victory. In bad straits financially, they will be able to pay off a note or two with the coin they received from the rich Cubs. Then, again, Donie Bush may handle Hemsley; moreover, Richbourg is a fine pedformer when he is well, and Smith is a good pitcher. Herman should aid the Cubs, but Babe often flops on good pitching.

George Gibson, Pirate manager, spoke only briefly on the deal. Gibby said:

"It's a swap that should pay dividends on both ends. The Cubs need a slugger and left-hand batter to balance their team and Donie Bush is likely to do something effective with the players he received."

FETE SHADY SIDE TEAMS

The Shady Side Academy football and soccer teams were guests of honor at a father and sons' smoker held in the McCune Dining Hall, Shady Side Academy. The speakers were Head Coach Waddell, of Carnegie Tech; Capt. William A. Palmer, Shady Side coach; Russell Davis, assistant coach; Coach Haviland, of the soccer team; Headmaster H. A. Nomer, and Clarence Overend, graduate manager at Carnegie Tech.

CALIFORNIA MAY ENTER CLASS AA

By JULIUS LEVIN

The Monongahela Valley, one of the strongest sections in Western Pennsylvania in the development of powerful scholastic football teams, promises to play an important role in the class AA race next fall, if present plans of the W. P. I. A. L. materialize.

Officials of the W. P. I. A. L. are making an attempt to get Donora and Monongahela to enroll in the double A group next season, while reports from California, where Carl Aschman is coach, have California eager to obtain a place in the big circuit.

The Monongahela Valley now has two members in the class AA race in Charleroi and Monessen, while just outside of that section are McKeesport and Clairton, also charter members of the league.

California always manages to turn out a strong football team and would prove a worthy addition to the roster.

The only section not represented in the membership is the Beaver Valley. Schools down the Ohio River, it is said, are unable to pay the guarantees demanded by class AA members, hence their refusal to enroll. Beaver Falls, Ambridge, Rochester and New Brighton, all hailing from the Beaver Valley, would help make the double A organization a powerful as well as a representative one.

School Notes

Two schools hold their football banquets tonight. Charleroi and South Hills celebrate the close of their grid campaigns with the election of captains as the outstanding feature.

Lewis Maraffi, of 335 New Castle street, Slippery Rock, Pa., writes to inquire where Forest (Jap) Dowds, former Wash-Jeff star, attended high school. Dowds is a graduate of Rochester High School.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Crafton Christian Church will be host to the members of the Crafton High School football squad at a banquet to be held next Tuesday.

In winning the "Big Five" football championship of the Monongahela Valley, Jimmy Russell's Donora Dragons tied the record of Steve Stepanian's Charleroi Cougars, who also hold three championships. Donora's triumps came in 1922, 1928 and 1932, while Charleroi was the victor in 1923, 1924 and 1929. Monongahela and Monessen each have worn the crown twice, while California won its only title in 1925.

Coach Bill Cox, at Washington High School, has turned his attention to basketball. The Little Presidents face a schedule of 20 games, exactly half of them Section XV contests. The season gets under way a week from Friday with the alumni quintet as the attraction.

Presidents Select All-Opponent Team

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 1.—Resting after their 1932 football wars, the football team of Washington and Jefferson College today selected an all-opponent team. Teams which met the Presidents during the season were West Virginia Wesleyan, Carnegie Tech, Detroit, Bucknell, Duquesne, Lafayette, Xavier, Marquette and West Virginia University.

The entire backfield selected was the unanimous choice of the Presidents, while two players, Stewart, Carnegie Tech end, and Schweitzer, West Virginia tackle, lacked just one vote. Myers, of Bucknell, was chosen as the most outstanding man of all opponents, while Bucknell was chosen as the strongest foe. The selections:

First team—Stewart, Carnegie Tech, and Reisterer, Detroit, ends; Schweitzer, West Virginia, and Laoma, Marquette, tackles; Bioddin, West Virginia Wesleyan, and De Carbo, Duquesne, guards; Kreuger, Marquette, center; Sullivan, Duquesne, quarter; Kavel, Carnegie Tech, and Myers, Bucknell, halfbacks; Reznichak, Bucknell, fullback.

Second team—Storey, Detroit, and Abele, Duquesne, ends; Seiss, Bucknell, and Metras, Detroit, tackles; Nesi, Lafayette, and Rozymarynowski, Marquette, guards; Edmundson, West Virginia Wesleyan, center; McCurdy, Carnegie Tech, quarter; McCracken, Detroit, and Elder, Xavier, halfbacks; Zaninelli, Duquesne, fullback.

Titans Card Seven Grid Foes for '33

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Dec. 1.—Seven opponents for the 1933 football season already are scheduled at Westminster College, and negotiations are going forward for two or three more contests. Five colleges are under consideration to fill vacant dates on the card.

Colleges already scheduled include Grove City, Muskingum, Duquesne, Thiel, Slippery Rock, Geneva and St. Bonaventure. The Slippery Rock, Grove City and Muskingum games will be played at New Wilmington, while the other contests will be played away from home.

For many years Gleason served as manager of the Chicago White Sox and is a familiar figure in American League baseball circles.

BUSH TO LIFT BAN ON GOLF

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The solid breastworks which certain major league baseball pilots threw up against the game of golf have been partially lifted now that the sport is better understood by the parties of the first part.

Donie Bush, former manager of the Buccos and a recent convert to the Scotch pastime, is out with a statement which gives the links game a qualified standing in the camp of the Reds. George Gibson, boss of the Buccos, also has softened a bit in his viewpoint since he began to shillalah the little white agates around the greensward.

GOOD FOR HEALTH

Perhaps the curriculum of a baseball training camp of the future will include golf as one of its subjects. There is no better training for a diamond star, especially a pitcher, than long walks. A five-mile jaunt over a links layout works wondrous results on most people and the game, of course, adds unmeasured pleasure to the hike.

Bush states he will permit his men to perform on the links on off days. He states that none will be allowed to play golf on days when games are scheduled. This is smart reasoning, for 18 holes of a hot morning will take away some of the zip needed on the diamond.

Bush's idea would not be harmed were he to amend it to allow pitchers to walk the courses as a part of their pointing for the task on the mound. When Dazzy Vance was having his best days on the slab he followed his mound efforts by excursions to the links.

A bad feature in mixing golf with baseball to a marked degree develops when the players carry the "cow-pasture-shinny" into baseball ponderings. When a diamond star puts on his battle togs, his mind and efforts should be on the task at hand. It is a bit hard for a manager to take up the opposing club's weaknesses while certain of the players are discussing hooks and slices.

NOBODY HOME HERE

The boys who talk a good game of golf around the baseball benches are a thorn in the side of any pilot. Another unpopular athlete is he who carries a set of sticks around the circuit. Little of this is done, but when a "ball-gamer" reels into a railroad station with golf clubs after his team has lost a tough game, his pilot is likely to crown him if the manager doesn't faint.

On a certain barnstorming jaunt of the Pirates, preceding the opening of the regular season, the baggage scene at the station presented, among other things, seven or eight sets of golf sticks. As the manager came along his gaze fell upon the huge pile of luggage with the golf weapons predominating. The setting led him to explain:

"What the dickens is this—the National Open!"

All-Southern Eleven Chosen

ATLANTA, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Every section of the Southern Conference is represented on the seventh annual Associated Press all-star football team, but two of the most successful teams, Virginia Poly and Louisiana State, failed to contribute a member.

Auburn, heir-apparent to the crown; Tennessee, Alabama, Tulane and Vanderbilt placed two athletes on the first team, while Duke has one. Virginia Poly, which lost only one game, has two players on the reserve eleven, but Louisiana State, unbeaten in its four Conference games, did not win a place on any of the teams.

Don Zimmerman, of Tulane, and Jimmy Hitchcock, of Auburn, polled the heaviest votes, although neither was a unanimous choice. Here's the first team:

Player—College.	Position.
David Arail, Auburn	End
Charles Leyendecker, Vanderbilt	Tackle
Thomas Hupke, Alabama	Guard
Clarence (Pete) Gracey, Vanderbilt	Center
John Scafide, Tulane	Guard
Fred Crawford, Duke	Tackle

NAVY ON EDGE FOR ARMY FRAY

MIDDIES MAY HAND CADETS SETBACK

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The word is being whispered around, little fearfully by the experts who have been fooled so often by football, that the Navy is in a "sweet" spot to beat the Army and redeem all the failures of a very ordinary season.

There is little in the records to prove that either team is capable of defeating the other, especially in the kind of game the service schools always play, but there is a strong possibility that the Midshipmen may reach the peak of their form Saturday, while the Cadets still are trying to recover from last week's defeat by Notre Dame.

NAVY RESTED

While Army was taking a licking and the battering that went with it, Navy had an open spot in its schedule, giving two full weeks of preparation for the big game. That rest and the absence of serious injuries may tell the tale, although there is a strong argument, drawn from the results of the season, that Army may come back stronger than ever.

The cadets did that once this season, returning to wallop Yale and Harvard thoroughly after losing to Pittsburgh, and nearly every other major team that has been knocked off the top of the heap in the past two months has returned in the same way to climb back toward the high spots.

Some idea of the condition of the two teams was gained from the story of yesterday's practice sessions, the semi-final home drill for each. Navy had only a light workout, devoted largely to signal practice and fundamentals, and the apparent aim of the coaches was more to keep their men on edge than to do any real preparing for the game. Rip Miller, Navy coach, cast aside all the customary "bear" stories, admitted that all his men were in good condition and named his probable starting lineup.

ARMY WORKS HARD

Army countered with a stiff drill, including 15 minutes of full-speed scrimmage, with the emphasis on defense against Navy plays. Four players were unable to take part in the hard part of the workout, two, Abe Lincoln and Pete Kopscak, merely followed the action from the sidelines, and Pick Vidal, star back, remained on the casualty list, unable to report at all. Ken Fields and Tom Kilday were able to work part of the time and probably will play against Navy.

Both teams were scheduled to leave home today after final workouts and establish camps on the outskirts of Philadelphia.

BIG TEN BOWL HOPES RISE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Alumni of the Big Ten in the Far West took heart today in their efforts to gain permission for Michigan to play Southern California in the Rose Tournament game at Pasadena January 2.

Optimistic reports from the Mid-West on the possible action of faculty representatives of the schools in favor of lifting the post-season game ban largely were responsible for the growing feeling that they will see the unbeaten Wolverines in action on the West coast.

Dick Hanley, coach of Northwestern, in a telegram to Dr. Herbert H. Deighton, president of the Los Angeles Alumni chapter of thta school, corrected an opinion that he opposed permitting Michigan to participate in the game.

Hanley was a member of the Washington State eleven which beat Brown 14 to 0 in the first Rose Tournament game almost 18 years ago.

WILSON GIVES O. K.

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—(INS.)—"I favor Michigan's being allowed to go to the Tournament of Roses Game."

This was the statement made today by K. L. Wilson, athletic director of Northwestern University in a telegram to the Detroit Times.

Last year, Michigan opposed any change in the rules to allow Northwestern to play in the grid classic on New Year's Day.

George Huff, athletic director at Illinois, is another Big Ten official who favors allowing Michigan to Play, according to The Times.

MORGANS DRILL FOR BATTLE

The J. Scott Morgan football team of the East End, one of the best elevens in the Lightweight Conference, is putting in some hard training licks these days in preparation for its charity game at Greenlee Field Sunday against a team of all-stars picked by Jimmy Rooney. The proceeds of the game will be turned over to the Thirteenth Ward Relief Fund.

Rooney has not as yet announced the makeup of his club, but posters state that the starting backfield will be composed of Jimmy Rooney, Bud Devinney, Jimmy Clark and Mose Kelsh, which will be all-star enough to give the Thirteenth Warders plenty to worry over.

The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock and present indications point to a great crowd being on hand. Players and officials have donated their services gratis for this game.

The Rooneys, West Penn Conference champs, play the Rockveiw Penitentiary team at the penitentiary near Bellefonte, Pa., this afternoon.

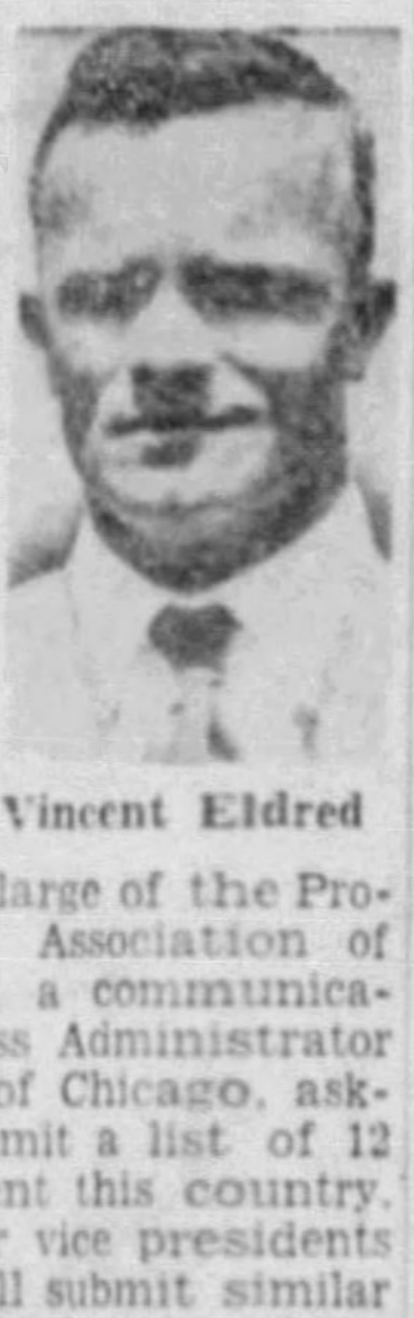
ELDRED MAY MAKE TEAM

By TOM BIRKS



Vincent Eldred

The possibility of Vincent Eldred, professional at the Highland Country Club, now playing in Florida winter tournaments, being named as a member of the United States Ryder Cup team for next year, developed today, when Fred Brand, professional at the Allegheny Country Club, president of the Tri-State Professional Golfers' Association, and newly elected national vice-president-at-large of the Professional Golfers' Association of America, received a communication from Business Administrator Albert R. Gates, of Chicago, asking Brand to submit a list of 12 players to represent this country.

The three other vice presidents of the P. G. A. will submit similar lists, and the final selection of the team will be made at a later meeting.

ELDRED'S CHANCES GOOD

Fred Brand and Dave McKay, professional at the Pittsburgh Field Club, attended the meeting of the P. G. A. at Peoria, Ill., last week, when the local man received national recognition.

While Brand has not committed himself, it is believed that Eldred's name will be on Brand's list.

The Highland man has had a fine season, and his 1932 record in tournament play compares favorably with any professional in the country. He finished twelfth in the National Open, was in the money in the Western Open, survived the qualifying round of the P. G. A. tourney at St. Paul, when many of the outstanding pro stars failed to qualify, and went to the third round before being stymied to death by Bobby Cruickshank.

Eldred won the Pennsylvania State Open and copped the Bedford Springs Open, with the cream of the Eastern professionals in the field.

Eldred created the greatest record any professional ever made in the tri-state district, and it would be a great honor to his club and the district, should he be included on the U. S. team.

LOCALS WATCH RUMPUS

Members of the Tri-State Professional Golfers' Association are watching with interest the reaction of the committee of the nation's leading golfers, formed to try to arrange bigger and better tournaments since President Albert Gates, of the parent body, from his Chicago office has taken a healthy slap at an effort to disrupt his organization.

Local professionals know that any move at the present time to promote major tournaments is ill-timed, but in many quarters it is felt that this is the first attempt to embarrass Gates, who replaced Bob Harlow as tournament director of the P. G. A.

Since 1922, when Walter Hagen won the British and Gene Sarazen the American Open, Harlow has been arranging and managing tours of national golf champions. He was appointed tournament director of the P. G. A. at that time.

ROLLS 300 SCORE

Billy Bryant, of West View, rolled a perfect score of 300 in duckpins at the Club Alleys, Diamond street, late yesterday. Bryant's feat of putting together 12 straight strikes was witnessed by more than 50 pin fans, who had assembled to watch the match in which he was participating.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES PROVE MERIT—STAGG

By AMOS ALONZO STAGG
Head Coach University of Chicago.

During the fall, I have been asked many times what effect the new rules had on football. My field of observation has been limited mainly to games in which Chicago participated, but I can truthfully say that the biggest effect which I saw at any time was a handicap on my own team.

In one game, Chicago was penalized at a time when it had a direct influence on the result of the game. In this case, the opponents were placed so near to Chicago's goal on a penalty that they scored, and the game turned on this particular score. The Chicago player forgot himself and played as the rules were enforced last year by dropping on the runner, but not viciously, immediately after he fell. Under this year's rules, the officials promptly and properly penalized Chicago. Other than this, I have not seen a single case in which the result of the game was affected by the new rules.

The rule which called forth the heaviest protest when the changes were made was the co-called dead ball rule, but curiously in the case cited the opponents suffered for piling on, which was the very thing the rules committee had in mind when it formulated the rule.

BACK FALLS IN CLEAR

Only once have I seen the runner fall in the open with no tackle near him. In this case, Pete Zimmer, the Chicago halfback, had a clear field for a touchdown, but the exhaustion of the long run in which he broke loose from two tacklers, outran two others, and then hurdled over the legs of one of his own men so exhausted and unbalanced him that he fell. Under the old rules he might have rolled four or five yards farther, but he hardly would have had strength and time enough to have got to his feet and run for a touchdown.

Three or four times I have seen a man go a yard further after touching his knee to the ground. Once H. O. Page, Jr., made four yards after touching his knee, and once an Indiana runner made about 13 yards after going to his knee on a tackle. In each case, the ball was set back, but it did not affect the result of the game.

In another year or two, piling on will be all wiped out because the players by that time will come to the realization that is needless and costly. In other words, the hold-over of old reactions to prevent the advance of a struggling runner on the ground will pass away, and before long a new generation of players will come in who will know practically nothing about the old rule.

BREAK FOR LINEMEN

In our games, there has not been a single penalty given for the illegal use of hands upon an opponent. I am led to believe that the effect of this rule has been most salutary. I have not seen nor heard of any case of personal antipathy arising between linemen, as in other years. I credit this, in part, to the doing away with the practice of using the hands upon the head of an opponent. Linemen can stand an unlimited amount of punishment inflicted upon the body, but when vicious tactics are used upon the face and head, the first impulse of a player is to resent it with angry retaliation. The seemingly general observance of this rule is a big advance towards good sportsmanship and fine friendly rivalry, which is quite in keeping with the progressive spirit of the present athletic times.

Y. M. H. A. Passers Face Butler Five

Two interesting basketball games are carded on the Y. M. H. A. court tonight. In the main game the Y Varsity meets the Butler Penn-Drake quintet. Last Saturday night, in Butler, the locals had to stage a sensational last-minute rally to eke out a two-point win.

The preliminary brings together what is known as a natural, when the Y Varsity B meets the I K S Little Varsity. Last year these two teams put up exhibitions in two games that were seldom duplicated on the Oakland floor, the Y boys winning both.

FAVORITES WIN IN TOURNEY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Favored contenders have survived early matches in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association preholiday intra-mural squash racquets tourney, first event on the local racquet list for the current campaign.

Possibility of a transfer of the all-O'Loughlin final system from the tennis rectagles to the squash courts looms as Dr. Dave, of the Winged Head net clan, has forged forward as upper-half favorite and default of Frank McClintock simplifies the task of Dr. John in the lower sector. Dave, however, is still menaced by threats from Rod Flannery, Bill Hutchins, Jack Beatty and Dr. Whitey Stegeman, while John's main problem is that of disposing of Graham McCargo.

The field, originally numbering 32, has been reduced to an even dozen, with Hutchins, Beatty, Stegeman and Sullivan at present advanced to the quarter-final bracket. The results to date:

First round—Upper half: Dr. David L. O'Loughlin won from S. S. Wunder, by default; J. Rogers Flannery defeated Dr. Jules LeBarthe, 15-11, 15-9, 15-12; Dr. M. A. Slocum defeated John F. Casey, Jr., 15-10, 15-12, 15-13; William Hutchins won from Robert Monroe, by default; John D. Beatty defeated Carl E. Henninger, 15-11, 15-12, 15-10; Dr. George Booth won from Sam Casey, by default; Mabon W. Bovard defeated Harbaugh Miller, 9-15, 15-8, 15-7, 15-2; Dr. G. Stegeman won from Thomas A. Thornton, by default.

Lower half: Dr. John L. O'Loughlin defeated Karl G. Wolfe, 15-10, 15-9, 15-11; Dr. Raymond Gillis won from Dr. John W. Lauler, by default; P. N. Dean won from Dr. A. C. Williamson, by default; Graham McCargo defeated Lieut. Winslow, 15-8, 15-10, 15-9; P. G. Sullivan defeated George D. Henderson, 15-12, 15-6, 15-10; Dr. C. F. Brand won from F. A. Hewitt, by default; Eugene Dowling defeated William R. Spindler, 18-15, 15-12, 9-15, 11-15, 15-12; C. I. Collins won from Frank S. McClintock, by default.

Second round—Upper half: William Hutchins defeated Dr. M. A. Slocum, 15-6, 15-8, 12-15, 16-13; Dr. G. Stegeman defeated Mabon W. Bovard, 15-6, 15-7, 15-8; John D. Beatty defeated Dr. George Booth, 14-17, 18-13, 15-11, 15-12.

Lower half: P. G. Sullivan defeated Dr. C. F. Brand, 15-9, 17-16, 15-8.

FOG HAMPERS POLO DRILL

The One Hundred and Seventh Field Artillery polo team is one practice session behind today in its preparations for the opening match of the Indoor Polo League campaign with the Three Hundred and Eighth Cavalry riders in the Hunt Armory Saturday night.

The Artillery poloists attempted to stage a workout in the Armory last night, but the dense fog made visibility so poor that the drill had to be called off. The Soldiers hope to swing into action tonight.

The Cavalry team is awaiting definite word from Bliss Flaccus, former Shady Side Academy star as to whether or not he is going to ride for them this year. If he does, the Cavalry's chances of making a fight for the league title will be greatly enhanced.

SCANS STATUS OF CREDITOR NATIONS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Defaults on certain private external loans and current efforts to readjust inter-governmental debts naturally lead to philosophical questioning as to whether it pays to be a creditor nation.

Sir Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, was once challenged to explain of what value to the British internal economy her international financial prestige was.

Mr. Rukeyser

The head of the English Central Bank, who rarely makes a public statement, replied:

"This is a very techninal question which is not easy to explain, but the whole international position has preserved for us in this country the wonderful position which we have inherited, which was for a while thought perhaps to be in jeopardy, which to a large extent, though not to the full extent, has been re-established. We are still to a large extent international bankers. We have great international trade and commerce, out of which I believe considerable profit accrues to the country; we do maintain huge international markets . . . And the confidence and credit which go with them are in the long run greatly to the interest of industry as well as to the interest of finance and commerce."

A characteristically vague and somewhat evasive answer.

Perhaps there will be a showdown on this question of Great Britain's actual balance of payments and benefits from her traditional creditor position, in connection with the current negotiations for revision of the conutry's war debt to the United States Treasury. The MacMillan commission raised some doubts as to the accuracy of conventional estimates of the value of Britain's invisible exports, resulting from income on investments and shipping and insurance services.

Much of the foreign lending in this country and in England was motivated by the willingness of alien debtors to agree to pay a higher interest rate than the one current in the home market. In this day of reckoning, it appears that not a few debtor governments in Latin America and elsewhere overestimated their own capacity to pay. Creditors, in their greed, similarly misjudged the debt liquidating capacity of foreign borrowers. Though foreigners were ready to contract to pay a higher interest rate than prevailed at home, it has not been demonstrated that opportunities for profitable employment of capital were sufficiently superior to those prevailing at home to justify the entire difference in the interest rate. In a word, some of the high yielding foreign bonds were ill conceived in that they provided for a destructively high rental charge on capital. In the long run, such an arrangement, which cannot be lived up to, is as harmful to the creditor as to the debtor.

STOCK MARKET PRICES DRIFT HIGHER

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The stock market today drifted through a quiet session, although prices showed gains of fractions to more than a point most of the time.

Several industrial shares which had been sold rather heavily in recent trading were fairly buoyant.

In the railroad group, Union Pacific did well, advancing more than 2 points. Sante Fe and Southern Pacific were up moderately. Eastern carriers were steady, confining their price changes to scant fractions. Steel stocks were rather soggy.

The market appeared to be still marking time, pending clarification of the war debt problem. The British note was received today and it was reported that France had dispatched its reply to the recent American message. Publication of the British note was expected tomorrow.

Another sharp rally in the British pound sterling, and early firmness of grains, notably wheat, helped to stiffen stocks' resistance. There also was considerable conjecture over prospective Christmas business. Wall street and retail business have been pleased by estimates that Christmas holiday savings this year would total about $500,000,000, some of which would find its way into the buying of gifts.

Another busy month for the dividend calendar is in prospect. More than 30 important dividend meetings will be held in December, with regular payments forecast by some brokers in about two-thirds of these cases.

The copper conference apparently has reached a stalemate on all but lesser points, pending the arrival here of Roan Antelope's managing director. Roan Antelope has insisted upon a larger 1933 production quota than it was allowed in 1932.

WESTERN CRUDE MARKET WEAK

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 1.—(AP.)—Support of the $1.12 top price for Oklahoma petroleum, announced six weeks ago, is lagging. The Deep Rock Oil Corporation, which buys about 8,500 barrels of crude daily, announced a drop to a top of $1 per barrel beginning today.

Two weeks ago Anderson-Prichard, of Oklahoma City, purchasers of about 5,000 barrels daily, announced a similar cut.

Both had joined in the advance with the independents and had participated in the battle waged by them to force two major buyers, Standard Oil of New Jersey, and Standard Oil of Indiana, to make the upward movement unanimous. The majors have contended consistently economic conditions do not justify $1.12 crude oil.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—J. R. Pemberton, California oil umpire, in a warning letter to the state's oil operators, calls attention to continued production in excess of the 440,000 barrels allowable, and says: "Something like an economic miracle will be necessary to sustain the market that is being weakened by every barrel of unwarranted production."

FRISCO'S BONDS IN DEFAULT

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Company, now in receivership, today defaulted in the payment of interest on its 6 per cent consolidated bonds, which was due for payment December 1.

The company was placed in receivership a month ago, after the management had faield to receive sufficient support for its proffered readjustment plan.

Under this plan, the company sought to reduce its fixed charges from approximately $13,700,000 a year to about $3,500,000, to and including 1936, with a gradual increase thereafter to $10,800,000 in 1941. Holders of the consolidated bonds under the proposal were to have received a bonus of preferred and common stock as compensation for granting a five-year moratorium on interest payments.

The company's capitalization consists of $19,866,000 consolidated mortgage bonds, divided into three series, which are junior to approximately $117,000,000 of prior lien mortgage bonds. Default on the December 1 interest payment on the consolidated bonds had been forecast.

B. & O. October Net Will Meet Charges

BALTIMORE, Dec. 1.—Net income of Baltimore and Ohio Railroad after taxes and charges in October exceeded the proportion of the road's fixed charges by over $1,000,000. The October proportion of the road's annual fixed charges is around $2,800,000.

Street Again Discussing Dividend Prospects Of 'Big Steel'

Recent action of Steel preferred will very likely prompt renewed discussion of the outlook for maintenance of the $7 dividend rate which has been held intact despite the fact quarterly requirements have not been covered since the three months ended June 30, 1931. The next meeting for action on the payment is not slated to be held until January 31 next. Wall street realizes the reluctance with which the corporation would interrupt the long unbroken record of payments on the issue, but the financial community has reached the point where it is willing to look the facts in the face. The company is still decidedly strong in cash resources, but including the preferred payment made last month, a total of $79,300,000 has been drawn from surplus to make up the deficiency between earnings and dividends in the last two years.

The November review of the New York Federal Reserve Bank says that, although the movements of the early autumn in business and banking have lost momentum, a large part of the gains have been held. Volume of member bank credit and reserves showed little change last month. Gold gains through imports and releases from earmark continued, although at a slower rate until the latter part of November. "Return of currency from hoarding was less rapid than during the preceding three months and currency movements were largely dominated in November by seasonal influences," the review states.

Touching on the low ebb of public interest in securities at the moment, one individual cited his own experience to support his contention that the dearth of outside interest in securities now is more pronounced than it was last June. Identified with a large New York firm, he had sent out several hundred letters to customers calling their attention to the possibilities of a stock selling to yield a return of about 11.4 per cent. The company enjoys an unusually stable business and most conservative estimates indicate the dividend will be covered by a small margin this year. Thus far, however, he has not had a single reply.

"Repeal" stocks were strong features on the afternoon rally.

Strength here with Owens-Illinois Glass in the van became quite pronounced after the turn of the day. The rise was ascribed to expectations that the Garner bill for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will be introduced in the House without delay when Congress convenes next Monday. The flurry of demand tended to enliven interest in the proceedings after trading had dragged along apathetically through the early hours.

Standard Statistics Company estimates that 105 corporations this year will earn "by a comfortable margin" their total dividends of $524,931,000. Net earnings of these companies for 1932 are put at $637,177,000. The estimate covers 83 industrials, nine utility holding companies, 10 utility operating corporations and three railroads. Last year the same 105 companies earned $802,661,000 net.

Dow, Jones & Co. says directors of the Reading company at their meeting late this month are likely to declare another quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, the rate paid in the last three quarters. Reading's net income this year is running ahead of 1931 and may approximate $4,000,000, equal to 85 cents a common share, compared with 37 cents a share last year.

Inventor of Auto Device Gets Big Award

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 1.—(AP.) — The Stewart-Warner Corporation was directed by Judge Robert N. Pollard in Law and Equity Court today to pay to Marvin Smithey, Mecklenburg County lawyer, a royalty of 3¾ cents on each of the speedometers manufactured or delivered by the corporation and used on Ford automobiles since 1924.

Thomas B. Gay, counsel for the defendant, noted an appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals. The device invented by Mr. Smithey enabled the driver to tell by looking at the speedometer whether his automobile needs lubrication.

COTTON DROPS ON SELLING

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Cotton futures opened steady, 1 higher to 3 lower on steady Liverpool cables which were offset by southern selling. December, 5.82; January, 5.83; March, 5.91; May, 6.00; July, 6.09; October, 6.26.

Increased southern selling as well as selling by local operators carried cotton values down after the opening, March declining from 5.94 to 5.85..

The market rallied about 10 to 14 points from the early lows on steady trade absorption of contracts, Liverpool buying on differences and commission house demand. Southern hedge selling tapered off.

March contracts sold up from 5.85 to 5.98c, with the general market showing new gains of about 3 to 6 points on the advance. A little profit-taking developed, however, and around midday prices were ruling at about the previous closing levels.

LOCAL MARKET UNCHANGED, QUIET

The Pittsburgh Stock Exchange list marked time today as the "big board" staged its first good rally in two weeks. Trading here showed no change from the general character of yesterday's market. Prices held to a narrow range and most of the business was of the odd-lot variety.

Fuels and industrials displayed a fairly steady tone, although the volume of trading was too small to determine an actual trend. Koppers Gas preferred found buyers at the 48-level at which it has been resting recently. Lone Star and Western Public Service were quiet and practically unchanged.

In the orewing group there were no price changes of importance. A few shares of Independent Brewing came out at 3⅛, and Fort Pitt sold again just under $2.

BUYING MOVES GRAIN UP

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—With deliveries of December contracts less than expected and apparently passing into strong hands, grain values scored early upsturns today. A sharp new advance in British exchange served as an additional stimulating factor. Opening unchanged to ½ higher, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started ⅛-1 cent up and subsequently mounted further.

About 2,000,000 bushels of wheat were handed over at the first opportunity today to settle Chicago December contracts, but cash interests were prompt to accept, and were buyers of all Pit offerings of Decemeber. Commission houses meanwhile purchased deferered deliveries and the market as a whole soon moved up 1½ cents a bushel.

Corn developed even greater strength than did wheat, liquidating sales of December corn being readily absorbed. Oats followed corn.

Provisions were responsive to upturns of hog values.

Forbes

How Research Wizard Keeps Up to Minute

By B. C. FORBES

ABOUT PEOPLE:

"Boss Ket"—otherwise Charles F. Kettering, General Motors research wizard—keeps 40 experts busy devouring every book and periodical, in all modern languages, likely to contain any new idea, any new knowledge, any new wrinkle along mechanical or other scientific lines related in any way to the engineering, metallurgical, chemical lines in which he is interested.

Mr. Forbes

His readers have a good idea of what he already knows, and draw to his attention only such things as they believe to be original. Sometimes he will be asked to read only six sentences in a heavy tome. Often a thesis in a technical journal can be boiled down to a few dozen words.

"Ket" early made a fortune by the fertility of his brain. His light, a miniature electricity-producing plant, one of his early inventions, proved a gold mine. Although now 56, he is as enthusiastically active as the most inquisitive schoolboy. He is perpetually searching for something new, something better than yet produced by the human brain.

It takes a big building, located next to the General Motors building in Detroit, to house the vast laboratories under Kettering's stimulating, resourceful leadership.

THE HEALTH of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is still far from satisfactory to his family and friends. His father, relatively early in life, cast off all business details, stopped going regularly to his office and gave decisions, as a rule, over the telephone connecting 26 Broadway, the home of Standard Oil, with his own home.

Young John D., on the other hand, is a slave to details, puts in a full day's work at his office and then takes home enough work to keep him engrossed all evening. Also, he takes life tremendously seriously, very rarely relaxing. This mode of living naturally is exacting its toll. He is 58.

Frank A. Vanderlip remarked to me the other day:

"Had I stayed in active harness, I would have been dead long ago."

He was president of America's first billion-dollar bank, the National City of New York. The responsibility of what he called "a thousand millions of debts which would be called for payment any day," became a strain on his health.

So, at the age of 55, he quit. He observed to me:

"Never once, for even a moment, have I regretted stepping aside."

For a time his health was bad. He was one of the very first, outside of experimental laboratories, to use insulin. He credits it with having saved his life, declaring:

"For me, my sickness no longer exists."

Of late years he has become more and more active in affairs. Also, he has resumed writing for publication. An ex-financial editor, it was his writings that first earned him fame shortly after he was taken from the Treasury Department at Washington by James Stillman to become a vice president of the National City. Once again Mr. Vanderlip is getting a real "kick" out of writing.

FOR MANY weeks Owen D. Young has spent most of his time straightening out the Radio Corporation-government suit. All parties involved are glad an amicable way out has been found.

I'm glad that Mr. Young will not accept any cabinet office that may be proffered him.

WHEN A. R. ERSKINE, head of Studebaker, dropped in to see me the other day, I offered him a light for the cigar he had in his mouth. He replied:

"No, thank you. I used to be a tremendous smoker, never without a cigar in my mouth. The doctors advised me to smoke less. Instead, I quit entirely and have never smoked since. But I keep a cigar in my mouth just as much as I did when I used to smoke."

Habit's a funny thing, isn't it?

HENRY FORD must feel peculiarly upset over his illness, necessitating an operation, because, never heretofore sick, he was possessed by the emphatic idea that there was little or no excuse for people not being healthy and robust. He once declared to me:

"All you have to do is to look after your digestion and your health will look after itself."

Mr. Ford, however, is no longer a young man; he is in his 70th year. But he has always kept himself in wonderful physical trim; eating sparingly, avoiding both liquor and tobacco, and exercising freely.

RADIO MELON BAN ASKED

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—A stockholder's suit was brought in Supreme Court yesterday to restrain the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company from distributing among their stockholders 7,500,000 shares of Radio Corporation of America stock, as a consequence of a recent Federal Court decree.

The suit seeks to return to the R. C. A., or cancellation of the shares. The affidavit declared that unless satisfaction was given, the R. C. A. may be driven into bankruptcy. Louis D. Frolich, vice president of the Torquay Corporation, which is the plaintiff and a stockholder in the R. C. A., said in his affidavit that the radio concern's financial history has been somewhat distressing, in spite of an asserted monopoly that it enjoyed for a time.

The affidavit said the stock rightfully belongs to the R. C. A. and that it was handed to the two companies in 1930 when the monopoly was created. The General Electric received 3,948,225 shares, or 60 per cent of the total issue, and Westinghouse got 2,632,150 shares.

ASK RECEIVERS FOR UTILITY

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed in Federal Court yesterday against the $300,000,000 Central Public Service Corporation on behalf of three holders of the company's $1,000 debtntures.

The bill alleged that the company committed an act of bankruptcy by transferring $20,000,000 in property to the Consolidated Electric and Gas Company on August 1, last, and also when it transferred $1,116,000 in railway bonds to the Central Public Utility Company the same day.

The petition set the company's liabilities at $40,000,000 and did not list assets. It is a holding company for utility properties in several states. Its report at the close of last year listed assets totaling $316,000,000 and funded debt of $240,000,000.

The Central Public Service Corporation last summer announced a readjustment plan entailing the transfer of certain properties to the Consolidated Electric and Gas Company, a new concern, and recently reported that the success of the venture apparently was assured by the support accorded by the stockholders.

FARM PRODUCTS INDEX DOWN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—A 2 per cent decline in the prices received by farmers for agricultural products was recorded for the month ending November 15.

Figures made public by the Agricultural Department showed the price obtained for 27 selected commodities was 54 per cent of the 1909-14 average.

For October 15 the percentage was 56 For November 15, 1931, it was 71.

Barley prices advanced approximately 10 per cent, sheep prices went slightly upward and butter and eggs made seasonal gains. Wheat, corn, apples, cattle, calves and lambs dropped to new low levels for the 24-year period covered by records of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Meanwhile, the figures showed, farmers had to pay 6 per cent more for articles they bought than during the pre-war years.

World Gold Output Higher in October

World gold output in October totaled 2,033,000 fine ounces as against 2,015,000 in September and 2,046,000 in August, according to the American Bureau of Metal statistics.

Gold production in the United States in October came to 255,000 ounces, comparing with 246,000 in September and 241,000 in August.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—The New York Stock Exchange has announced additional regulations governing the activities of its members.

Members were forbidden to carry accounts for any employe of the exchange, or its subsidiaries, without first obtaining the written consent of his employer.

They were forbidden, also, to carry accounts for any employe of a bank, insurance company or other organization, dealing in the purchase and sale of securities, without obtaining the employer's consent.

In addition, they were forbidden to give any compensation, "directly or indirectly," for services rendered to "any employe of a bank, trust company, insurance company, or of any corporation, association, firm or individual engaged in the business of publishing any newspaper, news service or statistics or information in regard to securities" without first obtaining the consent of the employer.

WESTINGHOUSE CHIEF NOTES RECOVERY

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—(AP.)—A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, said today "it is now safe to plan for the future, the worst of the depression is behind us and better times are slowly and steadily coming."

Speaking before the Boston Chamber of Commerce on the industrial rehabilitation movement, Robertson said this conclusion was based on the fact that the "financial panic, which caused the most acute of our troobles in May, June and July of this year, is past." He said:

"Gold is flowing into the country. Our central banks have hundreds of millions of excess reserves, so that money is cheap although not plentiful so far as business is concerned. Banks are no longer failing in large numbers and some closed banks have reopened. Hoarding is on the decrease.

REVIVAL STARTED

"In the past such a condition has always been the beginning of a business improvement and we are already beginning to feel a beneficial effect.

"Naturally we have asked the question, 'What effect will the election have on these activities?' Our answer before the election was 'None whatever.' Now that the election is over we have had time to survey business conditions and we are glad to say that the election had very little, if any, effect on business conditions. We have been at pains to check this fact and it is significant to note that business improved in the teeth of the election campaign.

BASIC LINES IMPROVE

"The more favorable signs to which I refer are the improvement in the price of securities, in the textile industries, increase in payrolls and employment, the drop in commercial failures and the increase in electric power production.

"This depression will be over when our normal habits are resumed and our normal optimistic frame of mind is in control. The plan of industrial rehabilitation is such a normal activity, it will help employment in the capital goods industry where unemployment is most severe."

MEN REALIZE THIS AS NEVER BEFORE

MOST men know their wives are not capable of handling an estate, should such a responsibility be put upon them. This is not a reflection upon the ability of women, for it can be said truthfully that few men are qualified by experience or training to be executors of another man's estate.
The point is that married men realize that, when the time comes, a woman can safely turn to the trust company for prudent counsel and sympathetic advice and get these, unbiased by personal prejudice or motives of selfish interest.

Finance Corporation Report Reflects Improvement

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

STRAINS ON OUR financial institutions are becoming less severe. This was indicated in the report of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for October.

The organization made fewer loans to banks in October than in any previous month since it has been in operation.

While the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has done much in its brief life toward meeting emergencies it was slower in performing its task of providing jobs by financing self-liquidating public projects. The last report shows that the corporation is catching up on this phase of its work. More loans were authorized for construction projects of this kind during October than for any other purpose.

The previous delay in getting projects of this type under way was traceable to the fact that time was needed to complete the necessary engineering work before ground could be broken. In addition, legislation was needed to authorize a large share of the public projects to be financed.

* * *

Loan Cancellations Shown to Be Large

DURING OCTOBER there was an unusually large proportion of cancelled loans. These cancellations aggregated $10,471,877. They represented loans which had been authorized by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to meet emergency situations which were expected. As matters turned out the situations were met without the troubled organizations having to use the Reconstruction Finance funds. In such cases the authorization usually is left on the books until all danger is passed and then the loans are cancelled.

Some of these cancelled loans were approved as far back as February. Of the $10,471,877 of cancelled loans, $5,436,448 represented loans approved before July 21.

* * *

Less Aid Needed By Financial Units

THE REDUCED needs of banks and the expanded volume of funds going into projects which will provide jobs can be seen in the classifications of loans made during the month. Loans to banks, trust companies and financial institutions in October totalled $33,096,916 as compared with $42,923,959 in the preceding month. Commitments to finance self liquidating public projects amounted to $81,914,500 in October against $53,105,000 in September.

Grandmother Is Displeased When Basil Sees Joyce During Her Absence

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Then Basil came back.

He went to Washington Square the night he landed. He had sent no word beyond a wireless from the boat. By merest chance Mrs. Sheldon and Elizabeth were out and Joyce was not. So he found her alone in her house for the first time.

He said nothing when the door had closed behind the servant who had announced him. He simply walked toward her and took her in his arms and kissed her deeply, thirstily.

"Joyce—"

She was adrift, she was bruised, she was breathless. When she could think again it was with amazement at herself. Why had she not been sure, why doubted while he was away? For wasn't she sure now? Wasn't this all there was to love, to loving—this unappeased ache, this melancholy rapture, this touch you couldn't get enough of, this trying to draw him to herself, through her fingertips, her lips, her soft skin, her very breath?

"Missed me?"

"Oh, so much!" she told him and, forgetting the hours in the classrooms and laboratories when she'd not thought of him at all, "All the time, every single minute!"

DISLIKES HER WORK

After a while—

"Look here," he demanded, "when are we going to be married?"

"Is that a proposal?"

"Can you think of a better?"

"No."

She was silent then. He asked, more urgently, "When?"

"Oh, I don't know, Basil. I hadn't thought of it somehow."

He was astonished, he was hurt, he was angry. Yet he hadn't thought of it himself until recently.

"But you must have known!"

"Perhaps."

"Then you will?"

"I suppose so," she conceded finally, "but not right away. I want to finish out my term. Oh, don't let's tell people yet—pryings and questions and wantings-to-know. I remember when Yvonne announced her engagement, it was terrible. Let's keep it our secret and then when we're ready, we'll tell them."

"I'm ready now!"

"I'm not!"

"I hate your work. What does it amount to, anyway? It's not as if you were going in for a profession, and you care more for it than you do for me!"

"You mustn't hate it, Basil."

"But I do!"

"Oh, hush," she implored in a sort of despair, "don't let's talk about it or about anything. I've got you back again, you're real, you're alive. I love you—"

JOYCE NERVOUS

But when, an hour later, he had left her and she had gone to her room, she sat down before a mirror and stared gravely at her reflected face. Her cheeks were bright, her dark hair tossed, a little damp, curling. Her lips had that kissed, crushed look; she saw with an abstracted interest that her hands shook.

She loved him. Yet she did not want to marry him.

"Basil Staines is back," Joyce told her grandmother and mother as she came in, late, to the breakfast table on the following morning. It was curious how long a time passed before she could pronounce the four simple words. She had started to say them, she thought, as she entered the door.

Louisa laid down her napkin and smoothed the back of one yellowing, wrinkling hand with the palm of the other. She stated, briefly, "Yes. He called here last evening?"

For courtesy's sake, the interrogation point was indicated in her tone. Elizabeth, glancing over a letter from Fanny, felt the heart stir in her breast, not lightly, as it fluttered newfledged wings of fear, but heavily, as if it vibrated to the tramp of inexorably marching feet.

Joyce nodded. She was wondering. How did she know?

"Well-brought-up young women of my day were not accustomed to receive men in the absence of their parents or guardians," Louisa said evenly.

SENSES WARFARE

Joyce had a sudden, wholly unfamiliar desire to scream, to send the Royal Doulton cup at her elbow clattering to the floor.

Her mother interposed hastily, glancing at the girl's face and away again.

"Things are different now, Cousin Louisa."

Louisa looked at her a moment. She twitched her straight mouth into a smile, vinegared with malice.

"I am aware of that, unfortunately."

Elizabeth shrank back, into her ineffectual self. Joyce, her own irritation forgotten, looked from one woman to the other. She had, as she so often had now, the sense of an unintermittent warfare. She experienced, also, a sense of gratitude to her mother's contempt at championship. It had been futile, and frightened, but unmistakable. Joyce pondered that on numberless occasions before this her mother had thrust herself between her and Louisa, a feeble, anxious buffer.

"Basil is an old friend," began Joyce defensively. "He came here almost directly from the docks, he could not telephone beforehand."

"Modern youth," remarked Mrs. Sheldon in her platform manner, "is apparently unaware of the most common usages of courtesy." She halted a moment, then announced abruptly, "After prayers, Joyce, I would like to see you in my room for a moment."

FOLLOWS LOUISA

She bowed her gray head and uttered the benediction which ended the meal. Then she rose and struck the old-fashioned gong by the pantry door, with which she summoned the servants to the brief morning prayers which she had attended, as audience or leader, for over seventy years.

Joyce heard nothing of the Bible chapter, the prayer. She was thinking, in mental gasps, of her mother, of Basil, of Louisa. She felt caged, confined; she felt that no matter where she turned she would be torn and bruised and seared against the iron bars of her grandmother's undeviating dominance, against the barbed wire of her own slowly awakening pity for her mother, against the burning barriers between Basil's personality and her own.

Presently she followed her grandmother up the dark stairs. From the landing the white gleam of marble leaned from a perennial dusk—the winged Hermes, static in his stone, young and eager and moveless as he had been when her father was a boy, as he would still be when she was as old as the tall, unwilling stooped figure passing up the stairs ahead of her.

She went into Louisa's room. Before she could close the door she heard a fluttering sound, an indrawn breath, and saw that her mother had followed and stood there, not quite beside her, but a little apart, on the threshold, waiting, it seemed, in a sort of defiant humility.

Mrs. Sheldon said: "Come in, Elizabeth—and shut the door."

Her tone was unhurried but the thick eyebrows drew together in a gesture of astonishment and annoyance.

JOYCE QUESTIONED

She sat down at her desk, turning to face her daughter-in-law and Joyce. It would have struck an observer that Elizabeth was the culprit.

"Joyce," Mrs. Sheldon said, not including Elizabeth in her glance, "are you thinking of marrying Basil Staines?"

Thinking of it? Of course, that was just what she was doing. Joyce was silent, flushing. Mrs. Sheldon continued.

"I—we—have a right to question you. Has Mr. Staines asked you to marry him?"

Joyce opened her dry lips, answered, "Yes," quietly, and waited.

"And you answered—"

Joyce felt oppressed. There was a sense of smothering in the room, a breathlessness, a vitality seemed to leave her. She wanted to cry, to turn blindly to harboring arms, to implore, "I don't want to—I don't—but I love him—what shall I do?—tell me, help me!"

If she said, I have accepted him, it would mean a shattering of her defenses, a cutting off of her reserves. She would be committed to—what? Happiness, disaster? If she said, I have accepted him, with reservations, on probation, she would meet with disapproval, blank non-comprehension, with perhaps an ultimatum. If she said, I have refused him, it would be a lie.

She answered slowly, and truthfully, let them think what they would from it.

"I don't wish to marry him—nor anybody."

She looked from one to the other. Mrs. Sheldon's controlled expression was unmistakably one of relief. But Elizabeth's! Joyce suppressed an exclamation at the sight of that gentle, colorless mask broken up into lines of stark terror.

ELIZABETH LEAVES

She hurried on, covering that moment of dark disclosure for which, as yet, she found no interpretation.

"I—he understands—we're friends."

"I see," remarked Louisa. "I would rather you had told me of your own accord. However, I thank you now for being quite frank with me. In my time," she smiled slightly, "a refusal did not premise a continuance of association. Things are altered now, however. Young people take such matters more lightly."

The door closed softly. Elizabeth had slipped from the room. Mrs. Sheldon looked blankly at the polished wood which shut her in with her grandchild. She unbent, held out a hand.

"Come here, my dear."

Joyce crossed the room, sat down at Louisa's feet on the old worn hassock. The long fingers touched her hair.

"You've been a good child. If I have seemed severe with you, if I have imposed restrictions upon you which have appeared unnecessarily strict, it has been, believe me, because I have had your welfare at heart. I am glad you are not going to marry Basil Staines. I find him light, unreliable, very like his mother—frivolous. If you do marry, I would like to see you choose a husband of strong, settled character, somewhat your senior. If you do not marry I shall be content. In my generation it was considered a woman's duty to marry, to bear children, even among those so placed that the financial necessity was not present. One of the few good things modern ways of thinking have accomplished is the abolishing of that convention. Nowadays, if a young woman has means, position, opportunities of travel and culture, she is not driven into marriage; she may make her own life. Marriage is, of course, the solution for the majority. Many women marry now, as they used to, for protection, a home. As long as I live you are assured the protection; when I die you will have all the safety, the comfort with which money can surround you. You are not domestically minded. I have observed that, watching you mature. You will be able to find a large and satisfactory life without the aid of a man.

"Children—" She paused and said, in a distant and dreaming voice, "Children are not always a recompense—you cannot hold your child—you watch him grow away from you—you have given him all of yourself—and the return is in impatience and blindness and rebellion."

She was silent. Joyce sat there, under the hand which lay still and heavily, upon her hair. The girl hushed even her breathing. For the first time she stood upon the threshold of knowledge. She knew, without another word uttered, that Louisa Sheldon was speaking of her dead son.

"There," said Louisa, at length, "run along. I have kept you—you will be late to your classes." She spoke indulgently as one who would say—I am keeping you from your toys.

"I do not wish to marry him," said Joyce.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Members who attended the Cameraphone Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club's regular meeting Saturday, were surprised and also somewhat disappointed to find that their old friend Earl Roeser had been transferred to another theater.

The meeting opened under the direction of Gene Poellott, the assistant manager, who led the members in the recitation of the club pledge and in the singing of "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner." Gene then read a message from Earl to the members and promised to introduce the new manager to them before the meeting closed and also told them that he had a surprise in store for them.

The first act on the program was Mercedes Brinker, who sang "Me Minus You," and gave a splendid tap dance.

ACROBATIC DANCE

Then a daring acrobatic dance was given by "Shorty" Secola and Henry La Pertche, both popular members. These two boys danced and tossed each other around the stage in a manner which was very close to professional. They both hope that in a few more years that they will be doing the same dance in the vaudeville theaters throughout the country.

Mercedes Brinker made her second appearance and this time sang "Just Whistle and Blow Your Blues Away." Changing somewhat from her regular routine, she ended this number with a beautiful toe dance.

Gene Poellott then asked the members if they had any requests, and a terrific din went up which only subsided when "Shorty" Secola and Henry La Pertche, who by this time had regained their wind, came out and thrilled the youngsters again with their daring exploits.

To quiet the "kiddies" Gene announced that the next part of the entertainment would be the balloon blowing contest for the girls. Ten girls were called to the stage and each given a balloon. The girl who inflated her balloon first to the breaking point was the winner. Little Patricia Falcone had the strongest pair of lungs.

BALLOON CONTEST

The chatter had somewhat subsided by this time, but broke out anew when the boys' balloon contest was announced and 10 boys came to the stage. Fred Hill blew himself right into the hall of fame by winning this contest. Gene had hoped to present the surprise at this point but the youngster had spied Catherine Mitchell in the wings and set up a shout for her. Catherine obliged by singing "Somebody Loves You," and ended with a fast tap dance.

As time was getting short Gene got the youngsters to quiet down and with everyone at attention Gene presented George Bronson, the new manager. Mr. Bronson made a short speech to the youngsters, telling them that the uppermost thought in his mind was their happiness and contentment and that while he knew he had a hard job in front of him to fill Mr. Roeser's shoes, that he was going to try and that he would start off by singing them a song. This brought many cheers and Mr. Bronson then sang "River Stay Away From My Door," with the members joining in singing the second chorus. By this time most of the disappointment of finding Earl Roeser gone had vanished, and when Mr. Bronson finished singing "A Shanty In Old Shanty Town," every child in the theater was for him hook, line and sinker.

Grabbing Grandpa's Musket

Now that we have election day and Thanksgiving under the belt we have to go back to that old arms conference again.

This thing ain't as wide or deep as Niagara Falls. But its been running just as long.

Started right after the World War when everybody had a gun and a knife. And everybody took those jiggers home with them.

The result was that one well-managed war broke up into a lot of wildcatting. Now, there's amateur battles going on all over the world while the pacifists are in Switzerland.

Every nation has a different idea about disarmament. France wants us to collaborate with her, but we can't do that without getting another nation sore.

Mussolini alone seems to have the correct slant. He's building boats, tanks and guns. He is ready. He knows if somebody poisons your bulldog in the afternoon you are going to have visitors the same night.

He can afford to lay back and say, "I ain't picking on you so don't make a banjo out of me."

He's got arms and plenty of them. And so has the rest of Europe. You can't get anywhere with kitchen mops. Not even into the corners.

Everybody has guns. We'll bet you we can shake down a Tuesday afternoon bridge club and get enough cannons to fire a 21-gun salute in eight different keys.

All this talk of disarmament is the noodles. It's just a diplomatic lullaby to sing the neighbor's baby to sleep.

There has always been war and there always will be war. We pick 1940 for the next big parade down the alley. If you're around at that time, you will again be in the ranks either as a soldier or a guest artist.

We admit that the pacifists have fooled a few dowagers. But they can't befuddle an old graybeard like The Bug. While he doesn't like onions he certainly knows them.

We are ready for it. We have already petitioned our Congressman to get us a job. We want to be the man who sticks the pins in the war maps. We love geography lessons.

FRISBY GRACEFUL IN TRAVAIL

"My enemies," declared Congressman Horace Frisby, in a sizzling statement last night, "are circulating charges of turpitude against my good name. They say I am a this and that, a so and so, and that I am here, there and everywhere. In contradiction, I will say that I have, in my possession, affidavits declaring that the whole American people, for that matter, have behaved in a very peculiar manner at times, and if this charge be founded, why doesn't the American people step up and deny it? I want to know what the American people were doing on the night of June 13. Before circulating stories about their Congressman, and assassinating his character, the American people had better check up on themselves. Take the mote out of the American people's eye first, is my motto. If the shoe fits, wear it. Where there is so much smoke, there must be some fire."

They Must Be Punished
The Only Effective Way to Stop Fraud at the Polls Is by Sending the Crooks to Prison.

The shameful story of how crooked politicians tried to thwart the will of the people at the recent election by altering ballots and through other forms of cheating continues to be told in the hearings held by the County Commissioners and the complaints filed with the United States District Attorney.

It becomes more and more evident that the only way that offers hope of stopping this fraud is a way that has not yet been tried—by sending the crooks to prison and compelling them to serve their terms.

The extensive cheating of November 8 is the aftermath of the leniency shown in the local courts to the 77 persons who were convicted or pleaded guilty of violating the election laws last year. Only 22 of the 77 were sentenced to prison, and of the 22 seven were paroled before they had served a day and the 15 others before they had completed their sentences.

Many of the election cases were tried by visiting judges from other counties who cannot be held to account by the citizens of Allegheny County. Chairman Charles C. McGovern, of the Board of County Commissioners, voiced a thought about this matter yesterday which expresses what many have been thinking. He said:

"One thing wrong is that when our 14 judges have an election case to try they bring in some tramp judge from outside. If our judges were courageous enough to try the cases themselves, we might get somewhere. Instead they bring in 'Judge Booze,' who tries the case and then apologizes to the defendant after the jury convicts."

The natural suspicion is that the local judges are unwilling to try election fraud cases, or to send the crooks to prison, in the event of conviction, because the crooks are in most cases connected with the Republican machine, and the judges, with a few exceptions, owe their election to the Republican machine, and look to it for re-election.

But recent elections in Allegheny County have shown that the Republican machine is not invincible and that the people are rapidly losing patience with it.

The people will expect the judges whom they themselves have chosen to pass on election fraud cases, that they may be held personally responsible for their action.

A Tax Cut Is Demanded
A Budget Reduction Merely Sufficient to Keep the Levy at the Present Level Will Not Be Enough.

Plainly impressed by the public indignation over the seven-mill increase in the tax rate that his budget would necessitate, Mayor Charles H. Kline said yesterday, after a conference with department heads, that he had told them "to cut things down to the core and comply with the wishes of Council."

The taxpayers will be inclined to ask why the cuts were not made before the budget was submitted to Council, since the facts as to the necessity of economy were no less obvious during the period in which the budget was under preparation than they are now.

But let that pass. The Mayor shows a disposition to yield. The important matter now is that he and his department heads yield sufficiently. It will not do merely to cut appropriations to a point at which it will be possible to maintain the tax rate at the present level.

The people cannot pay taxes at the present rate. Taxes must be reduced.

The Scholarship Racket
Competitive Examinations Would Put an End to the Present Unfair Practice.

Each of the 50 State Senators in Pennsylvania is given 12 scholarships annually—three each to the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania State College and Temple University—to dispose of as he sees fit.

Evidence has been uncovered that a few of the Senators have been bartering the scholarships. There is ground for suspicion that others use them for political purposes, turning them over to henchmen for the use of sons and daughters who may have no claim either in poverty or ability to free tuition.

The system is wrong and should be changed.

Senator Frank J. Harris has set a good example by letting committees choose the recipients of his scholarships.

A sensible solution of the problem would be to award the scholarships to those who make the best showing in competitive examination.

See the West End Grow
The New Bridge Dedicated Today Promises Great Things for That Part of the City.

The new $3,595,000 North Side-West End Bridge is being dedicated today. It is one of the four bridges that were provided for in the county's $43,000,000 bond issue; the others were the McKees Rocks Bridge, the Boston Bridge over the Youghiogheny and the South Tenth Street Bridge, not yet completed.

The new structure is a credit to the community, and it is appropriate that pomp and ceremony should mark its formal transfer to the people.

Now watch the West End grow! That part of the city has been hampered in its development by lack of facilities for communication. The West End people could not reach the North Side except by a long roundabout route. The new bridge will be good for business and property values.

Beware the Rifle!
With the Opening of the Season for Deer Hunting Danger Increases in the Woods.

The season for deer hunting opened today. The shotgun, used in shooting small game, is laid aside, and the deadly high-powered rifle is taken up in its stead. The most dangerous period in the hunting season has opened.

The Game Commission warns hunters to wear red, back and front, lest they be shot in mistake for deer.

It is still more important that no gunner shall blaze away until he clearly sees the deer and where the bullet will go if he misses. Many fatalities have been due to the inexcusable carelessness of hunters who have shot at every large object that was stirring in the brush.

Seventy-two persons were killed and 367 wounded in hunting accidents in Pennsylvania last year. All these accidents could have been prevented by the exercise of caution.

Marry-Go-Round
By HELEN ROWLAND

Women Were 'Weaklings'

Some of those fierce and bitter denunciations of "the Tyrant, Man," written in the days of the pioneer feminists, would make awfully amusing reading for the modern woman.

* * *

Imagine the Tired Business Girl, home from a hard day at the office, slipping into her pant—beg pardon, pajamas — lighting her cigaret, and picking up a newspaper of 20 years ago, to read a passionate plea for woman's "right" to do a man's work and share his privileges. Or a violent protest, declaring that "women are no weaklings!"

NOW DEAR - YOU'RE NOT STRONG ENOUGH TO WORK

Shades of Amelia Earhart! What many a girl is looking for today and can't find, is some man who will "tyrannize" over her, and MAKE her stay at home and get her beauty-sleep, while he goes out and rustles for the bacon.

* * *

A man who will think of her as a "weakling" when it comes to things like getting the car out of the garage, changing a tire, getting up in the dark to answer the telephone and settling the dinner check.

* * *

A man who will "There-there-little-girl" her when she's feeling all in or blue, who will pat her on the head and put on her galoshes and baby her occasionally, and make her feel coddled and "cherished" and all that.

BUT-
NOW- I KNOW YOU'RE NOT ABLE TO DRIVE A CAR

Of course, no modern woman wants to be regarded as a "weakling," if it means that she is too weak to be allowed to drive her own sport car, too faint-hearted to be taken along on a camping trip, too delicate to sit through a boxing bout, too nervous to travel in an airplane, too dainty to sit in the smoking car or too helpless to handle a golfstick or a bank account.

* * *

As a crusading feminist of the old school fiercely declared, "women are strong enough to accomplish any feat that a man can accomplish."

* * *

Of course they are. But they are also weak enough, in these days, to wish they hadn't let men know it; and to long secretly for some of the coddling they got in the days before he found it out.

* * *

Lots of modern girls would like to know how it felt to be tenderly treated as "weaklings." But, it all depends on what you MEAN by "weaklings."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Never before have Manhattan social barriers been so near ground, or, better perhaps, the gutter. The world's drench of gloom washed away usual restrictions. It is not mere tabloid tattle that two debutantes have been seen publicly with racketeers.

Many social queens, toppled from thrones by the "calamitous disjointment," began to mingle with the "ermine society" of cafes. Because of the respectability of their names, society cadgers welcomed them fervently. Robert Louis Stevenson once wrote: "Where the clear spring gushes, the maggots breed."

Money will talk in the social swirl invested with gin, but the thing such people crave above all else is the impossible—a listing in the Social Register. Ermine society hasn't that domination of leadership of the 400. Leadership is largely a back-wash of headlines. The most publicity wins!

One season the leader may be a chorine with a millionaire husband; the next, one of those liason agents posing as a theatrical booker. This, after all, is a society epitomizing the bleak idea nothing matters, except to get on. Free food and drink, and ornamental frequenters of the social fringe kow-tow!

Ermine society parties are given against a background of nickleodian-cathedral decor, plus a gloomy overtone of woolworthian Notre Dame. Many feel, at last, they have arrived. They are launched among the swells. And, as long as they believe it, what does it matter?

* * *

Depression despair: The Jules Brulatours now purchase only two first night seats, down front, omitting the third extra for wraps. A dog shop on Madison avenue reduces scented baths from $2 to $1, and Peggy Fears has worn the same chinchilla three nights in a row.

* * *

Leo Marsh, who shouldn't go such places, was guest at a la-de-dah tea the other afternoon. The host came in late, explaining he had been on a beagle hunt. "A beagle?" quizzed Marsh, in a wrinkle of wonderment, and then, in quick click, "Of course. My cousin used to blow one in the army." Nor did anyone protest when a sober-faced butler Spanish-walked the irrelevant proletarian to a back exit.

* * *

My attitude toward college education is one of polite indifference. I am constantly (and a shade jealously) tweaked by an awareness of lack of it. Yet I maintain, the chief asset is a cultural gloss, which means little in getting on in the world. Today, I talked to two ladies turned out in high polish by fashionable schools here and abroad. They now are taking business courses to obtain $30-a-week jobs.

* * *

The Libby Holman hoop-doo again accentuates the gun complex among the petted darlings. Whether to tag big game in Africa or twirl a revolver at a hectic studio soiree, there is a pronounced flair for firearms. Young Vanderbilt, chasing Peter Arno across a Reno hillside, is a part of the picture. Those bachelor apartments may have tesselated floors, caryatid mantles, enormous swimming pools and such, but, also, invariably a gun room.

* * *

Add gay similies—Dorothy Parker in Harper's Bazaar: "His voice was intimate as the rustle of sheets."

* * *

Franklin P. Adams has been turning out a daily newspaper column for a longer period than any other metropolitan minnesinger. He is the only one to go to an editorial room daily, pen his pillar by hand in green ink, and indulge in shop talk enthusiasms after "30."

* * *

Idiosyncracies: Benjamin De Casseres, once a printer, loafs in composing rooms . . . Dorothy Hall and Neal Andrews, divorced, call each other "darling" . . . James Stillman, the banker, likes to walk deserted streets late at night . . . Montague Glass enjoys sliced raw potatoes . . . The George Fitzmaurices play sun-up tennis . . . Lillian Gish never "dresses up" to attend first nights.

Post card: "At last, I am standing in the Coliseum in the winter moonlight, with the boy friend. Have you any ideas?" An Ethereal Blonde.

LISTEN, WORLD
By Elsie Robinson

I have just sent a box of vegetables to my mother.

Every year, when the trees burn gold against the crackling blue and the stars flare white in a dark that whines with frost, I send mother a harvest box from my ranch.

Magenta egg-plant, dusky as new wine—

A cauliflower like a hard, white rose, set in a wreath of painted, wooden leaves.

Waxy bell-peppers, with their stinging scent, as though each fruit were wrapped in sharp, green air.

A bunch of yellow turnips, like old ivory balls, their curled green tops touched with autumn rust.

Red cabbage—crisp cold, claret-colored globes.

A dozen russet pears, in their thin, gilded leaves.

An orange pumpkin, with a wisp of pine.

Some carrots, with the rich, dark mold still powdering their brilliant, coral flesh.

Apples, of course; scarlet, chartreuse and rose.

A Hubbard squash as hard as old, green bronze.

Some small dried figs, dark blue and honey sweet, wrapped in a twist of crimson grapeville leaves.

A bag of pine nuts, gathered by Indian Mary from the sugar pines.

And pomegranates, with split, ruddy sides, from which spill ruby-jellied seeds.

Each year, at fall, I make a box of these. A gay, bright box, each fruit wrapped in wax paper, then wrapped again in tissue, blue and green, vermilion, orange, lemon, violet. Then—all heaped in a box that's lined with autumn leaves. A gay, bright box, that smells of wind and sun and spicy earth that still holds withered flowers.

And each year, before this, I've laughed as I packed that box.

But this year I was sad.

Angrily sad, thinking of the misery of our muddled world, of all the people who are needing things.

Silly sad, thinking of some of the things I want myself but can't have, because the money won't go around.

Sad and angry and twisted all through me, in spite of the fact that my hands were filled with all that harvest beauty and pride and joy.

And suddenly it came to me how wrong I was—how wrong we all are. Not wrong to grieve over another's misery. Not wrong to fight to heal that misery. But wrong to go on building the kind of gaudy, artificial world that makes such misery.

What did I need—what did we all need—more than I had there?

Sunlight spilling over a clean pine board. Good earth, clean water, a strong fresh mind, a bird song tumbling out of a blackberry bush. Vegetables; fruits; wild nuts.

Simple things. Common things. The simplest, commonest thing. Yet, in them, everything that a man may need for his soul or body. Work and food. Honest sweat and honest pride. And as much beauty as he has wit to find and heart to feel.

A box of vegetables that, in the market, would cost a dollar—but, in the making, would support a life.

There, in just such simple things, in just such common work, lay the answer to it all. The cure for it all.

And yet we give our life to pile up millions. We build machines; we slave for machines; we become machines. And out of it all, what do we get?

Not as much beauty, not as much power, not as much pride or peace as lay there—in a box of vegetables!

Ballyhoo and Mysteries
By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

And so, as we suspected, there is a plan of unified action on the part of the nations that borrowed billions from us to make common cause in the effort to transfer their debts to the American taxpayers to pay. That was plain as a pikestaff in the notable similarity in the phrasing of the English and the French notes.

Now we have it from Paris that the smaller nations are looking to France to "protect" them against the payment due. Some of these nations have been loaned great sums by France, though France does not want to meet her payment on the loans to us. These loans to the smaller nations by France were made in connection with the perfection of alliances or understandings for the purpose of war.

Meanwhile we have conflicting tales from London. Ramsay MacDonald is now convinced of two things: One is that between this time and December 15 the United States will relieve her of the necessity of making her payment. The other is that England simply cannot pay.

This is the position assumed by the extremists in England, and the London correspondent of the New York Sun assures us that there is much indignation in business and financial circles there because of the sensational stories about England's inability to pay.

No one undertakes to explain why nations that can each year expend appalling sums for purposes of war cannot reduce these sums to the extent of the amount due upon the debts, and still have appalling sums in their budget for war purposes.

And the American allies of the debtor nations do not explain how they reach the conclusion that we not only have the capacity to pay for one nation, but for all the debtor nations combined.

Trade Will Not Follow Moratorium

We are told by those seeking to transfer the debts to this country that the moment we grant another moratorium there will be a flow of trade to us. Somehow we seem to have heard something of the sort before. Yes—we did!—at the time of the last granting of a moratorium. And the flow of trade? There was nothing of the sort. Most of the debtor nations have built tariff walls so high that American goods cannot get in. These walls still stand; they will be standing after a second moratorium.

It is true, of course, that these tariff walls were built in retaliation against the prohibitive tariff wall we built.

Just how we are to have a "flow of trade" so long as these walls stand, no one explains.

We are not Shylocks and we are not fools; we are not animated by any feeling of hostility against the debtor nations, but by a determination to protect our own interests; and if it can be shown that we will gain more, or as much, as we will lose by taking on ourselves the tax burdens of the world, it would be to our interest to do so.

But the burden of positive proof is on those who contend that such would be the result. These answer us vaguely with theories. And it "is a condition, not a theory, that confronts us."

When Congress meets it must find new taxes to meet the deficit which has been growing; and if the money due us, and which is included in our estimate of receipts is refused, then, within 60 days, we must increase our own taxes to the extent of the money thereby lost.

How about our "capacity to pay?"

France Is Surely Able to Pay Debts

No one even suggests that France is unable to pay.

Everyone knows she is able to pay.

And yet France and England both pretend to be shocked and indignant because Secretary Stimson, in his note demanding payment, said that the idea of a general review of the debts had never been contemplated by the administration.

If we had an explanation of this indignation we would be able to solve the mystery of the reason for the confidence Europe has felt in our willingness to take over part, or all, the debts, despite the declaration of Congress.

It is charged directly by some of the newspapers in Europe that in the secret conference between President Hoover and Laval a general review was agreed upon. This would possibly justify the debtor nations in indignation against the administration because of Stimson's note; but by this time Europe should have known that Congress alone can transfer the debts.

Definite Program Might Aid Cause

Meanwhile Mr. Roosevelt is being attacked because he did not fall into the trap set for him by Mr. Hoover The question we are discussing now is the moratorium. This comes to a head December 15. At that time Mr. Hoover will be President. The responsibility is his. Mr. Roosevelt at that time will be a private citizen. When he assumes the responsibility it is to be assumed that he will submit his own ideas on international relations. These ideas will not be those of Mr. Hoover, under whose direction our international relations have been so muddled.

Since the election—and for the first time—Mr. Hoover has publicly admitted that the word "cancellation" is deceptive, and that the forgiving of debts in whole or in part is not real cancellation at all, but a transfer of debts to us.

Such being the case, the proponents of the transfer, instead of being snooty regarding those who stand for America first would better serve their cause by submitting a definite program through which we can gain more than we lose by the policy they propose.

Chamber of Commerce Opposes Cancellation

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce follows the fashion with a statement in opposition to cancellation, and takes a position that is more nearly that of Mr. Roosevelt than is that of Mr. Hoover. It also accepts Senator Borah's ultimatum that reductions in the debts must be accompanied by reductions in armament. It even goes so far—for it—as to agree that possibly something may be done about the tariff for the restoration of foreign trade. It reiterates its stand for a protective tariff, and thus it admits, by inference, that the present tariff is not protective, but destructive, because prohibitive.

But how much more effective and to the point it would have been had the chamber not given an opposite impression during the recent campaign!

Ramsay MacDonald Shifts Position

Ramsay MacDonald's shift on England's ability to meet her obligation would be more impressive were he the Ramsay MacDonald we formerly admired. His position as Premier is increasingly embarrassing. He is surrounded by his traditional political enemies. They would like to see him out. One way for a Ministry, so constituted, to rid itself of an obnoxious member is to adopt policies antagonistic to his own, and force his resignation.

But this has been tried. The Ministry has adopted policies that are a direct negation of the teachings and principles of MacDonald's lifetime. Instead of resigning, he shifted his position. Perhaps it is the only way he can hold on to office; but this shiftiness has robbed MacDonald of his erstwhile reputation as a fighting man who would not "bend the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift might follow fawning."
